WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union and the United States are attempting to develop high-energy beams of charged sub-atomic particles to destroy incoming nuclear missiles, U.S. intelligence officials said Friday.

Two American military intelligence officials said the Soviet "particle beam" program was comparable in size to the huge Manhattan Project, with which the U.S. developed the atom bomb in World War II.

One said the Soviet program had been under way for more than 20 years and was "the hottest thing since the atom bomb."

If perfected, a particle-beam weapon could virtually eliminate the concept of nuclear deterrence, which has formed the core of the U.S.-Soviet strategic balance, military intelligence officials said.

The American projects for developing particle beams as weapons are much smaller in scale than the Soviet's — the Navy funding was said to be a few million dollars annually, and the Army funding still less.

There have been sporadic studies of the possibilities of particle-beam weapons in this country since 1960, according to Richard L. Garwin, an IBM fellow who has acted as a scientific consultant to the Defense Department for a number of years.

Despite skepticism in the American scientific community about the potential effectiveness of such weapons, the Army and Navy have recently expressed renewed interest in them as missile defenses.

The particle-beam concept involves the acceleration of charged particles — electrons or protons — and the aiming of a stream of them at a target. Aiming of particle beams is performed by precisely tuned electromagnets, but is difficult at great distances.

The particles are acquired by inserting a gas like hydrogen into an accelerator and speeding it up to high velocities, which breaks down the atom into sub-atomic quantities. With hydrogen, the acceleration process eliminates electrons, leaving only protons, which are the nuclei of hydrogen atoms.

In the case of nuclear warheads, the idea would be to melt the plutonium explosive with the beam, neutralizing it before it could be detonated over a target.

To accomplish this from a ground base, however, would require "boring holes in the atmosphere so the beam can go through," Garwin said.

He added that the "heaviness" of the atmosphere scatters and weakens particle beams. To make the beams effective would require heating up a portion of the atmosphere, perhaps with a laser beam, prior to application of the weapon.

In the case of ballistic missiles, Garwin said, it is conceivable that particle-beam accelerators could be put in orbiting satellites which could be targeted on a missile in its

Shivering East is threatened by another blizzard

Associated Press

The long-shivering East Coast got a brief respite from the cold Friday, but forecasters warned of new weather problems ahead, including another possible blizzard in hard-hit Buffalo, N.Y.

The warning came as natural gas, diverted from the West under President Carter's emergency energy bill, was moving toward fuel-starved areas in the East and Midwest which were trying to recover from last weekend's snows and cold. These supplies were for homes and not expected to provide much help for closed factories and businesses.

President Carter will declare nine counties in western New York a disaster area, making Buffalo and the surrounding area eligible for federal aid, Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., said Friday night.

The White House refused comment on the matter, but Moynihan said Carter had called him to tell him of the decision, which would be made official this morning.

Columbia Gas Transmission Corp. announced at Charleston, W.Va., that heavy demand on its natural gas reserves had reduced its ability to deliver gas to the District of Columbia.

It said customers already were at a point where the gas they now have available for their seasonal allocations from Columbia Transmission for the rest of the winter

Jobless rate drops sharply in January

By PHILIP SHABECOFF
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The nation's unemployment rate declined steeply last month, but the improvement may prove illusory, government experts said Friday.

The good news of the lower number of jobless workers was tempered by the fact that the data was collected before the full impact of the cold wave was felt and by a decline in the size of the nation's work force that may have been caused by the weather conditions.

THE Labor Department reported Friday that its monthly survey of the employment situation showed that unemployment rate dipped to 7.3 per cent of the work force in January, down a substantial half of a percentage point from the previous month. The 7.3 per cent was the lowest jobless figure since May last year.

However, the survey was made during the week that ended Jan. 15, before the fuel shortage began to shut down factories and businesses. The January rate, therefore, probably does not reflect the full impact of the frigid weather on employment.

Paradoxically, the snow and intense cold may have contributed to the lower unemployment rate by keeping unemployed people from going out and looking for jobs, according to Julius Shiskin, Commissioner of Labor Statistics. If jobless men and women do not look for work, they are not counted as part of the work force and, therefore, are not listed on the unemployment rolls. The labor force declined by an unusually high 440,000, to 88.5 million, in January.

In testimony before the Joint Economic Committee, Shiskin also reported that the average work week declined sharply last month, with most of the decline coming from "outdoor" industries such as construction.

The Independent, Press-Telegram has the best sports section in California.

That was the judgment Friday of the California Newspaper Publishers' Assn. which reviewed entries in the 1976 Better Newspapers Contest.

Judges for the CNPA, which had its 89th annual meeting in San Francisco, also gave the newspaper first place in the human-interest writing category.

In both classifications, sports and human-interest, the newspaper's entries were entered in the highest circulation categories.

Sports sections were judged on the basis of local appeal, columnists, photographic excellence, comprehensiveness of coverage, makeup and general appearance. John Dixon is executive sports editor for the section.

The winning human-interest entry was a story by reporter Stan Leppard following the death of Mickey Cohen. Leppard described his personal encounters with Cohen and related other anecdotes.

'My Town' Wrigley, Westside: Some had hope

Seven years ago they moved in with their dreams and their hopes and their family.

They had read an article describing the area as the most racially balanced in the United States.

That was for them. They wanted their children to grow up alongside others of all races.

They just knew people of different races could live together in peace and equality. Their children would have something special while they were growing up.

And the price was right. There were not many other places where they could afford to buy a home.

Seven years ago it was, and today the high hopes have plummeted and the dreams are nightmares.

God forbid their teen-age daughter should go out alone.

It's almost as risky for their 16-year-old son with his long, blond hair.

They can't send the fifth- and sixth-grade children to the store two blocks away because older ones will terrorize them and force them to hand over the shopping money.

Instead of racial peace and equality, they have prejudice of all races towards each other.

It is a particularly vicious prejudice where some sociologists say it's not supposed to exist — children against children.

If you're white, some say, you can't get on a football or baseball team. The coaches will accept you, but the players won't.

What can be done?

They try and sell, move out anywhere, just get away from where they are.

But the homes out anywhere are worth $10,000 more than theirs, and they have less floor space and are in poorer condition.

Their home is depressingly redlined — on the wrong side of the freeway — and it would be hard to refinance even if a buyer could be found.

The only one who seems to appreciate its value is the tax collector, and he appreciates it at $170 more than he did last year.

It's depressing not to be able to say something nice about the neighborhood.

There are a number of decent, law-abiding citizens trying to work things out. More of them, though, see the day-to-day futility. More of them become apathetic.

The letter from a Westside home owner was signed:

"A Concerned Resident, Not a Radical."

From another concerned resident, Mrs. Helen Nixon:

"The Westside is a most desirable place to live.

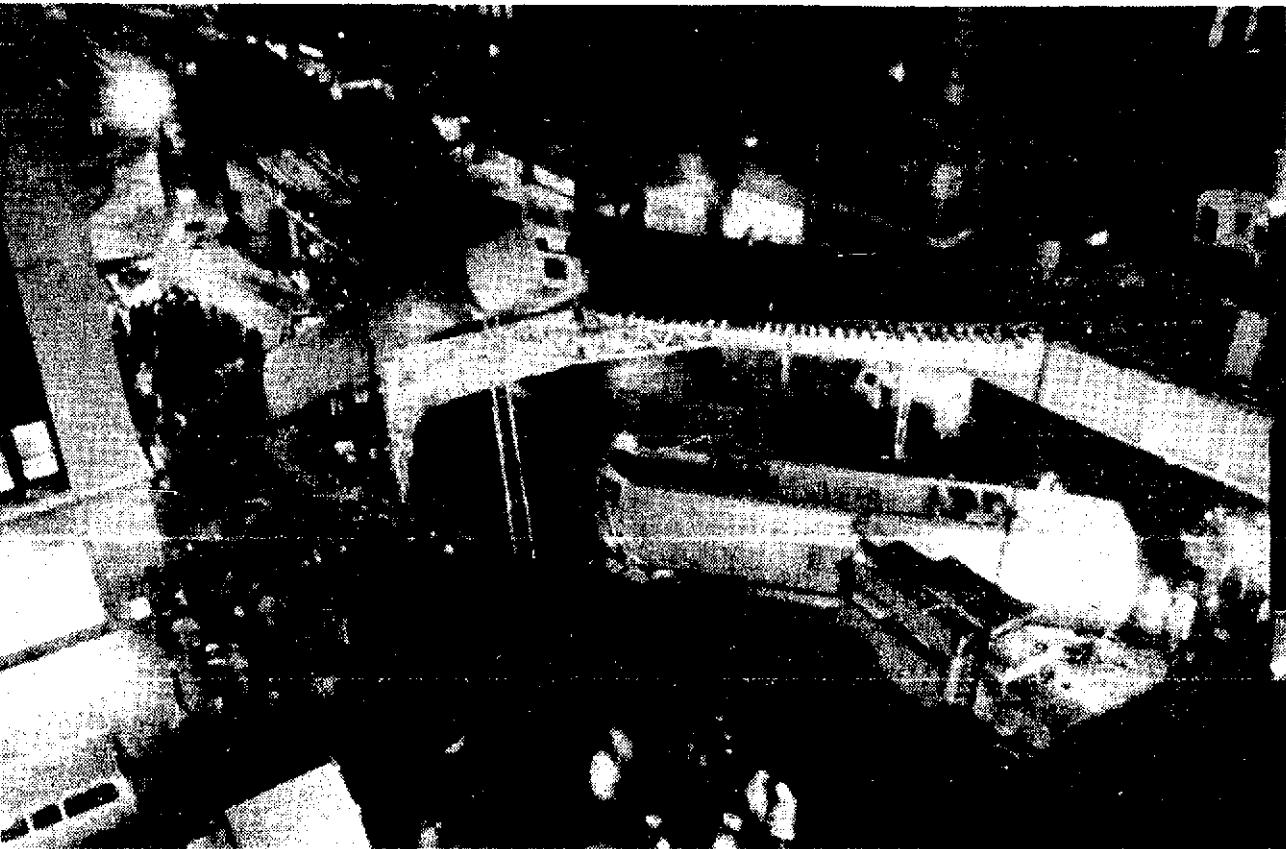

"We have good street lighting, are centrally located where we can get downtown or on the freeways with great ease, have lovely old trees, good schools and churches.

"It is a well-adjusted integrated neighborhood where residents of different cultures are living side by side and liking it."

COACHES LIE ON CHICAGO STREET AFTER PLUNGE FROM TRACKS FOLLOWING TRAIN COLLISION

16 die as Chicago 'El' dives to street

CHICAGO (AP) — At least 16 persons were killed and more than 200 injured Friday when a rush-hour elevated train slammed into the back of another stopped on the tracks, sending cars and passengers plunging into the street below.

"People fell out of the train and the train fell on top of them," a witness said.

The crash occurred in the heart of the downtown business district.

The cause of the crash was not known, Chicago Transit Authority spokesman Don Yabush said.

Ambulances flooded into the area as crews struggled with saws and torches to free trapped passengers.

The crash, coming at the end of a storm that dumped nearly four inches of snow on the city, occurred about 5:30 p.m. as the train rounded a sharp turn on tracks that form the northeastern arc of the Loop.

Three cars of the train, headed for the western suburb of Oak Park, plunged from the tracks into the street and a fourth was piled atop one of them.

Police appealed to all doctors living on Chicago's Near North Side to rush to hospitals in the area to help treat the injured.

Witnesses said they saw a giant flash, like a bolt of lightning, at the time of the crash.

Erica Williams, 33, who was on her way home when the crash happened, said "everybody was very calm, no screaming or yelling or anything."

"Some man was saying, 'Don't move. Keep the train steady so we won't fall all the way down,'" she said.

'No crime' to grow own pot, says drugs chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief of the government's drug-abuse program said Friday it shouldn't be a crime to grow marijuana in your own home for your own use.

Dr. Robert L. DuPont, director of the National Institute on Drug Abuse, said that removing criminal penalties for private cultivation of marijuana at home would correct an oddity that now exists in several states where possession of small amounts of marijuana is not a felony, but growing it or trafficking in it is.

"Personal cultivation in the home can be considered the functional equivalent of private use," DuPont said.

"I continue to be impatient about the reluctance of Congress and most state legislatures to adopt reform laws," DuPont said.

Mitchell, Haldeman ask new trials over Watergate

Last word in poor taste

A Gary Gilmore T-shirt is on the market and selling well, its creator claims.

"It had to happen," said James K. Bozony. "Someone had to do it, and it's me."

The shirts designed by the 23-year-old graduate student sell for $5.95 each, and demand at the University of Massachusetts campus in Amherst has been so great he says he cannot keep up with it.

"Let's Do It" reads the back of the shirt, quoting Gilmore's last words before a firing squad Jan. 17 made him the first person legally executed in the United States in a decade.

Gilmore's name is on the front, next to a bullseye target over the heart. Gilmore wore a shirt with a target over his heart when the Utah State Prison firing squad executed him.

"The fact that the execution became an event is a reflection of our taste as a culture," said Bozony, a native of Ballston Lake, N.Y. "That's what is really absurd, not the shirts."

But Bozony said he faces possible legal problems from Lawrence Schiller, a freelance journalist and photographer who signed contracts with Gilmore for the killer's story.

"He claims he can sue," Bozony said. "We say baloney to that."

Fifty shirts have been sold on the campus since last week, Bozony said, adding that he's looking to increase production and advertise nationally. Bozony said the shirts will be marketed through his own company, In Poor Taste.

JAMES BOZONY, left, shows fellow University of Massachusetts graduate student Paul Drexler his creation, the Gary Gilmore T-shirt. Bozony claims it's not the shirt that's absurd, but rather the culture that glorifies an executed murderer.

Former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and one-time White House aide H. R. Haldeman, each convicted for a pivotal part in the Watergate scandal cover-up, told the Supreme Court on Friday they deserve new trials.

The trial that ended in their convictions two years ago should have been postponed until the "massive and extraordinarily extensive" publicity surrounding the Watergate scandal had died down, their appeal said.

The two former confidantes of ex-President Nixon did not contest their guilt, but claimed they were denied a fair trial.

Each was sentenced to prison for 30 months to eight years. Neither has served a day of that sentence, pending appeal.

John D. Ehrlichman, a former Nixon aide convicted along with Mitchell and Haldeman, already had appealed to the Supreme Court. Ehrlichman, however, chose to begin serving the prison sentence he received for his cover-up conviction and a separate conviction stemming from the 1971 burglary of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Ehrlichman is now a prisoner at the Swift Trail Federal Prison camp at Safford, Ariz.

Aside from the publicity issue raised in their appeal, Mitchell and Haldeman said their rights to a fair trial were denied when:

—Presiding U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica refused to disqualify himself despite his alleged bias against the defendants.

—Their testimony before the Senate Watergate committee was used as evidence in the criminal proceedings.

—Sirica refused to allow them to subpoena testimony from Nixon, either in person or in writing.

Snow 'a shock'

President Carter's 26-year-old son, James Earl (Chip), toured severely winter-struck Buffalo, N.Y., Friday, expressing some amazement at what he saw, but offering no promise of stepped-up federal aid.

The Georgian, who is making the tour at his father's request, said:

"I'm a little shocked, very shocked—I've never seen so much snow in my life."

He was driven through valleys plowed through massive snowdrifts and told that 150 inches of snow—more than double the normal amount for a full winter—had already fallen. One of the effects, he was told, is that the Buffalo area unemployment rate reached 46 per cent this week.

In his tour, Carter stopped for the usual shaking of hands with snowplow drivers and chats with surprised citizens.

Billy in print

It was perhaps inevitable. Bantam Books is rushing into print with a quickie volume called "Redneck Power: The Wit and Wisdom of Billy Carter," which will go on sale Feb. 15. The editors, Jeremy Rifkin and Ted Howard, have culled newspapers and television takes for their material and offer Carter saying things like "I don't even know what a redneck is." On his brother's drinking habits, Billy Carter is quoted: "Jimmy used to drink liquor. Now he's running for President and he drinks Scotch, and I've never trusted a Scotch drinker." Although Carter earlier this week signed an agreement with an agency that will market his wit, wisdom, and personality, he will receive no proceeds because the material is excerpted from uncopyrighted sources.

Amy's nurse

Mary Fitzpatrick, a convicted murderess who cared for President Carter's daughter Amy when Carter was governor of Georgia, arrived in Washington Friday to begin a new job at the White House—once again caring for the nine-year-old.

She was greeted by a throng of reporters and television lights when she stepped off the Eastern Airlines plane at National Airport.

Clearly taken aback by the attention, the 31-year-old Mrs. Fitzpatrick said she was happy and excited about her new job.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick was granted an early release by the Georgia Board of Pardons and Paroles this week after it received a written request from Rosalyn Carter, the President's wife.

"I was excited, real excited," Mrs. Fitzpatrick said about the release. She would have been eligible for final parole in April.

Getting out

The Maguire family, whose loss of three children in communal violence gave birth to the peace movement in Northern Ireland, is emigrating to New Zealand.

Jackie Maguire, 33, an auto mechanic, said Friday the New Zealand government has accepted the applications of himself, his wife, Anne, and their surviving son, Mark, who is six. They hope to leave Belfast in June for Auckland.

On Aug. 10, 1976, British troops in Belfast's Roman Catholic Andersonstown district, where the Maguires live, opened fire on a car that ignored a halt order. The driver was killed and the car plunged out of control into Anne Maguire who was on the sidewalk with her four children, three of whom were killed.

Young, the first black American ambassador to the United Nations, is in Tanzania to meet with African heads of state gathered here for a weeklong celebration of the union of the political parties of Zanzibar and Tanganyika. The two former colonies make up Tanzania.

Soviets oust U.S. reporter

MOSCOW — The Soviet foreign ministry Friday ordered a correspondent for the Associated Press to leave the country within a week. It was the first expulsion of an American journalist in seven years, and it underscored the rising government pressure directed against the Western press in recent months. The correspondent, George Krimsky, has been known as one of the most tenacious reporters in the Moscow press corps. With a good Russian-speaking ability and many Russian friends, he has been particularly active in covering dissidents in a period when Soviet authorities are strengthening efforts to curb the dissident movement.

At the same time, some Soviet dissidents blame the arrest of their colleague Alexander Ginzburg on what they consider weak human rights statements by President Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.

During his "fireside chat" Wednesday night, Carter said the administration's campaign to end political repression abroad will not be carried to the point of interfering with international relations. Ginzburg manages a fund for jailed dissidents and their families.

Meanwhile, the Polish government offered a conditional pardon Friday to those convicted of rioting last year against food price boosts. The state council, which made the announcement, attached the condition that anyone pardoned "show repentance" and demonstrate he would "not return to crime."

The yellow balloon landed only 140 yards from the Gulf of California as Thomas flew in the wrong direction in his race eastward against the clock. "We're doing awfully good going north-south. Mitchell, Haldeman ask new trials over Watergate

in poor taste

A Gary Gilmore T-shirt is on the market and selling well, its creator claims.

"It had to happen," said James K. Bozony. "Someone had to do it, and it's me."

The shirts designed by the 23-year-old graduate student sell for $5.95 each, and demand at the University of Massachusetts campus in Amherst has been so great he says he cannot keep up with it.

"Let's Do It" reads the back of the shirt, quoting Gilmore's last words before a firing squad Jan. 17 made him the first person legally executed in the United States in a decade.

Gilmore's name is on the front, next to a bullseye target over the heart. Gilmore wore a shirt with a target over his heart when the Utah State Prison firing squad executed him.

"The fact that the execution became an event is a reflection of our taste as a culture," said Bozony, a native of Ballston Lake, N.Y. "That's what is really absurd, not the shirts."

But Bozony said he faces possible legal problems from Lawrence Schiller, a freelance journalist and photographer who signed contracts with Gilmore for the killer's story.

"He claims he can sue," Bozony said. "We say baloney to that."

Fifty shirts have been sold on the campus since last week, Bozony said, adding that he's looking to increase production and advertise nationally. Bozony said the shirts will be marketed through his own company, In Poor Taste.

JAMES BOZONY, left, shows fellow University of Massachusetts graduate student Paul Drexler his creation, the Gary Gilmore T-shirt. Bozony claims it's not the shirt that's absurd, but rather, the culture that glorifies an executed murderer.

Former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and one-time White House aide H. R. Haldeman, each convicted for a pivotal part in the Watergate scandal cover-up, told the Supreme Court on Friday they deserve new trials.

The trial that ended in their convictions two years ago should have been postponed until the "massive and extraordinarily extensive" publicity surrounding the Watergate scandal had died down, their appeal said.

The two former confidantes of ex-President Nixon did not contest their guilt, but claimed they were denied a fair trial.

Each was sentenced to prison for 30 months to eight years. Neither has served a day of that sentence, pending appeal.

John D. Ehrlichman, a former Nixon aide convicted along with Mitchell and Haldeman, already had appealed to the Supreme Court. Ehrlichman, however, chose to begin serving the prison sentences he received for his cover-up conviction and a separate conviction stemming from the 1971 burglary of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Ehrlichman is now a prisoner at the Swift Trail Federal Prison camp at Safford, Ariz.

Aside from the publicity issue raised in their appeal, Mitchell and Haldeman said their rights to a fair trial were denied when:

—Presiding U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica refused to disqualify himself despite his alleged bias against the defendants.

—Their testimony before the Senate Watergate committee was used as evidence in the criminal proceedings.

—Sirica refused to allow them to subpoena testimony from Nixon, either in person or in writing.

Snow 'a shock'

President Carter's 26-year-old son, James Earl (Chip), toured severely winter-struck Buffalo, N.Y., Friday, expressing some amazement at what he saw, but offering no promise of stepped-up federal aid.

The Georgian, who is making the tour at his father's request, said:

"I'm a little shocked, very shocked — I've never seen so much snow in my life."

He was driven through valleys plowed through massive snowdrifts and told that 150 inches of snow — more than double the normal amount for a full winter — had already fallen. One of the effects, he was told, is that the Buffalo area unemployment rate reached 46 per cent this week.

In his tour, Carter stopped for the usual shaking of hands with snowplow drivers and chats with surprised citizens.

Billy in print

It was perhaps inevitable. Bantam Books is rushing into print with a quickie volume called "Redneck Power: The Wit and Wisdom of Billy Carter," which will go on sale Feb. 15. The editors, Jeremy Rifkin and Ted Howard, have culled newspapers and television takes for their material and offer Carter saying things like "I don't even know what a redneck is." On his brother's drinking habits, Billy Carter is quoted: "Jimmy used to drink liquor. Now he's running for President and he drinks Scotch, and I've never trusted a Scotch drinker." Although Carter earlier this week signed an agreement with an agency that will market his wit, wisdom, and personality, he will receive no proceeds because the material is excerpted from copyrighted sources.

Amy's nurse

Mary Fitzpatrick, a convicted murderess who cared for President Carter's daughter Amy when Carter was governor of Georgia, arrived in Washington Friday to begin a new job at the White House — once again caring for the nine-year-old.

She was greeted by a throng of reporters and television lights when she stepped off the Eastern Airlines plane at National Airport.

Clearly taken aback by the attention, the 31-year-old Mrs. Fitzpatrick said she was happy and excited about her new job.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick was granted an early release by the Georgia Board of Pardons and Paroles this week after it received a written request from Rosalyn Carter, the President's wife.

"I was excited, real excited," Mrs. Fitzpatrick said about the release. She would have been eligible for final parole in April.

Getting out

The Maguire family, whose loss of three children in communal violence gave birth to the peace movement in Northern Ireland, is emigrating to New Zealand.

Jackie Maguire, 33, an auto mechanic, said Friday the New Zealand government has accepted the applications of himself, his wife, Anne, and their surviving son, Mark, who is six. They hope to leave Belfast in June for Auckland.

On Aug. 10, 1976, British troops in Belfast's Roman Catholic Andersonstown district, where the Maguires live, opened fire on a car that ignored a halt order. The driver was killed and the car plunged out of control into Anne Maguire who was on the sidewalk with her four children, three of whom were killed.

the WORLD TODAY

Cuba wants fish talks

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — Cuba has notified the United States that it wants to discuss the new American law establishing a 200-mile fishing zone off this country's coasts, the State Department said Friday.

The Cuban message was sent about two weeks ago through the Swiss government, which maintains an embassy in Havana and has acted previously as a conduit for exchanges between this country and Cuba.

The law reserving fishing areas for 200 miles offshore will come into force March 1. It is obviously a cause for concern in Cuba, which lies only 90 miles off Key West, Fla.

Under the law, known as the Fishery Conservation and Management Act, the United States has signed fishing agreements with other nations which stipulate the conditions under which foreign fishing will be permitted inside the 200-mile zone. As in the situation between the United States and Canada, however, where each country has important fishing grounds off the other's coasts, an agreement with Cuba would presumably necessitate some delicate demarcations of fishing waters.

Blue Cross scored

WASHINGTON — Loose, haphazard cost controls and payment of uninsured medical expenses by Blue Cross-Blue Shield cost taxpayers millions of dollars in health insurance premiums, government auditors said Friday. The investigation by the General Accounting Office concluded that the giant health insurance association often paid doctors and hospitals for government employees' medical expenses even if the charges weren't covered by insurance.

Carter, blacks meet

WASHINGTON — President Carter gave black elected officials a list Friday of minority group members he is considering for administration jobs, but made no promises about $2 billion they requested to put urban black teen-agers to work. Meanwhile, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said that, if Congress rejects President Carter's $50-per-person tax-rebate plan, it will be tough to find an alternative way to stimulate the economy this year.

Young in Africa

ZANZIBAR, Tanzania — Andrew Young said Friday he does not believe the prospect of Marxist governments in southern Africa poses a direct threat to the security of the United States. Young said future governments in southern Africa, regardless of their ideology, would depend on the West for technical assistance, capital and exports.

Young, the first black American ambassador to the United Nations, is in Tanzania to meet with African heads of state gathered here for a weeklong celebration of the union of the political parties of Zanzibar and Tanganyika. The two former colonies make up Tanzania.

On wrong track

PHOENIX — Karl Thomas, who moved only 50 miles eastward in two days, said Friday he has moved his hot air balloon back into the United States in an attempt to find better winds.

Thomas, 28, landed his 95-foot-high balloon near the Mexican fishing village of Puerto Penasco, Sonora, early Friday. The yellow balloon landed only 140 yards from the Gulf of California as Thomas flew in the wrong direction in his race eastward against the clock. "We're doing awfully good going north-south. It's the east-west progress that has been disappointing," Thomas said.

Thomas said his crew would study weather reports and planned to continue the flight tonight or early Sunday from Hope, Ariz., about 50 miles east of the Colorado River on U.S. 80.

Prisoner exchange

MEXICO CITY — A constitutional amendment allowing Mexico to comply with a prisoner-exchange treaty with the United States became effective Friday. The treaty would allow Americans held in Mexican prisons to serve out their sentences in the United States. In return, Mexican citizens jailed in the United States would be sent to Mexican prisons.

Soviets oust U.S. reporter

MOSCOW — The Soviet foreign ministry Friday ordered a correspondent for the Associated Press to leave the country within a week. It was the first expulsion of an American journalist in seven years, and it underscored the rising government pressure directed against the Western press in recent months. The correspondent, George Krinsky, has been known as one of the most tenacious reporters in the Moscow press corps. With a good Russian-speaking ability and many Russian friends, he has been particularly active in covering dissidents in a period when Soviet authorities are strengthening efforts to curb the dissident movement.

At the same time, some Soviet dissidents blame the arrest of their colleague Alexander Ginzburg on what they consider weak human rights statements by President Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.

During his "fireside chat" Wednesday night, Carter said the administration's campaign to end political repression abroad will not be carried to the point of interfering with international relations. Ginzburg manages a fund for jailed dissidents and their families.

Meanwhile, the Polish government offered a conditional pardon Friday to those convicted of rioting last year against food price boosts. The state council, which made the announcement, attached the condition that anyone pardoned "show repentance" and demonstrate he would "not return to crime."

2 youths held in four murders, including L.B. coed

By DENISE KUSEL
Staff Writer

Two young men from Stanton and Anaheim have been charged with the murders of four Orange County residents, including a Long Beach City College coed, police said Friday.

A California Highway Patrol officer arrested the pair Tuesday on Interstate 15, near Victorville, after recognizing their car as one reported stolen, Anaheim Police Chief Harold A. Bastrup told a press conference Friday.

A third man in the car also was arrested and has been charged with the attempted murder of a San Diego policeman.

The trio was first held for investigation of grand theft auto, but when Anaheim police inspected the car they found in the trunk "guns, blood and human hair," Bastrup said.

Brett Mathew Paul Thomas, 18, of 9171 Cerritos Ave., Stanton, and a 17-year-old Anaheim boy, identified because of his age only as an escapee from a California Youth Authority camp near San Diego, are charged with the slayings of an Anaheim father and daughter on Jan. 29.

Aubrey Lee Duncan, 48, a pool hall owner, was shot at 3:50 a.m. in the doorway of his Anaheim home, at 925 S. Velare Ave., after returning from work. The shots awakened his 18-year-old daughter, Denise Marie, who was shot to death when she walked into the open doorway.

Thomas and the juvenile are also being held for the murders of LBCC student Laura Anne Stoughton, 20, of Garden Grove, and Ephraim J. Christian, 34, of 9722 Katella Ave., Garden Grove.

Miss Stoughton was found Jan. 21 shot to death on a remote hilltop in Orange with a crucifix clutched in her hand. Orange police said the young woman was apparently kidnapped as she started to enter her home.

Christian, a clerk at a Garden Grove drive-through dairy, was shot to death during a holdup Jan. 24.

Bastrup said the juvenile is also believed to have taken part in the wounding of San Diego police officer James N. Robb, who was shot five times when he walked into a store during a holdup. Robb is still in serious condition.

The juvenile is charged with 17 felony counts, including four counts of murder, two counts of attempted murder and counts of burglary, armed robbery and auto theft. Thomas is charged with 16 counts.

The third man, William

Frank Haup, 19, of 9161 Cerritos Ave., Stanton, a neighbor of Thomas, is charged with a single count of attempted murder in the San Diego shooting.

Bastrup said the motive in the crimes appeared to have been robbery.

"This is one of the strangest cases I've seen," Bastrup said. "In three cases, the suspects apparently walked up to the homes of their intended victims, knocked on the door, robbed and murdered them."

"I think all of the crimes were random incidents. We haven't found a set pattern."

He said he did not believe the murder of Janet Stalleup, 19, a nursing student at Cypress College, who was found Dec. 27 with her neck broken in her parked car in a Garden Grove residential area, was connected to the other homicides. Detectives had speculated earlier that the Stalleup and Stoughton murders were linked.

Bastrup said he felt the arrest of the trio had ended a crime spree that had plagued the Anaheim area. The guns confiscated in the trio's stolen car fit the descriptions of weapons used in several robberies, he said.

He said the three defendants live near the Duncan home and fairly near the residence of Miss Stoughton.

Band booster

At the Long Beach Municipal Band concerts last summer, pleas for membership in the Band-Aids, a group supporting the band, were made. After we sent in our money, we never heard another word from this group. Can Action Line find out who its officers are and how much money was collected? Can we deduct our membership fee on our tax return? L.H., Long Beach.

The new booster group for the Long Beach band is a nonprofit organization, but hasn't yet been granted official tax exempt status, from the Internal Revenue Service, so your contribution isn't deductible. The organization's president, Robert Perry, who owns a Long Beach investment firm, said the group is just starting to organize its activities and will begin sending out regular newsletters to all members in the near future. The group plans to promote the band and campaign to keep it a full-time city-subsidized organization. Perry said the group collected $1,200 last year and has spent about $300 on stationery and other office expenses. The membership fee is $1 for an individual, $3 for a family and $25 for a business. Contributions can be sent to the Band-Aids at P.O. Box 3574, Long Beach, Calif. 90803. The organization currently is run by a steering committee composed primarily of business and professional leaders. In addition to Perry, the committee members are Alice and Paul Burbage, Elliott J. Dixon, Donald G. Gill, Whitney A. Halteman, Ronald D. Salk, John Schwartz, Janice Sunshine, Frank Thomas and Charles and Kathy Ward. The Long Beach Municipal Band was formed in 1909 and now costs the city about $500,000 a year. In 1958, an attempt to eliminate the band in an effort to save city funds was defeated by the voters who approved continuation of the band.

Air grievance

Can Action Line tell us who is responsible for the "Great Dominguez Air Meet" deception on Jan. 16. According to a story in the I, P-T, the Dominguez Seminary's commemoration of the Dominguez Field Air Show, which was held on that site in 1910, would be open to the public. Yet we were stopped at the main gate of the seminary and told we could not enter without a pass or an invitation. It is very unfair to read in the paper that the event is open to the public and then be turned away because we weren't one of the privileged few with invitations. C.F., Long Beach.

The event was open to the public, but parking on the seminary's grounds was restricted to invited guests who arrived early, according to a spokesman for the Dominguez Seminary. "The sheriff's department informed us that we could have only so many cars parked on the grounds for safety reasons, so we had to tell even some of the invited guests who arrived later that they must park outside and walk in," the spokesman said. He added that you should have been told only that you must park outside, not that you couldn't attend the ceremonies without an invitation. More than 2,000 persons attended the event.

SOUND OFF!

I work in the Bank of California Building on the corner of Ocean Boulevard and Magnolia Avenue across the street from the courts and police buildings. Many times, I use Magnolia as an access to Broadway in order to avoid the congested traffic on Ocean going east. Since the completion of the new parking structure on Magnolia, driving down that street has become much like a game of dodge ball only the balls are replaced by pedestrians darting across the middle of the street toward the parking area. Last night, I nearly hit a gentleman who had made an attempt to cross the street and was blocked by oncoming traffic and had to stop in the middle. Unless the laws have changed, crossing in the middle of the block is illegal and quite dangerous as illustrated by my experience. It seems to me that since the police are in such close proximity, perhaps they should patrol that area for a while, reminding pedestrians to please use the crosswalks and signals as an aid to both themselves and the drivers using that street. P.B., Long Beach.

SANTA MONICA (AP) — A man has been arrested after authorities confiscated a large quantity of weapons at his business here, but police said Friday there is no evidence the cache is related to other munitions recently discovered in Southern California.

Police said Walter Tallmadge, 44, of Santa Monica, was booked for investigation of possession of illegal weapons, a misdemeanor, after a "substantial" quantity of munitions was found at his company, Data Industries, which manufactures model railroad equipment. The arsenal included a .50-caliber machine gun, 20 rifles, 15 handguns, 40,000 firecrackers, 900 feet of fuse wire, and several Frank Haupe, 19, of 9161 Cerritos Ave., Stanton, a neighbor of Thomas, is charged with a single count of attempted murder in the San Diego shooting.

Bastrup said the motive in the crimes appeared to have been robbery.

"This is one of the strangest cases I've seen," Bastrup said. "In three cases, the suspects apparently walked up to the homes of their intended victims, knocked on the door, robbed and murdered them."

"I think all of the crimes were random incidents. We haven't found a set pattern."

He said he did not believe the murder of Janet Stallcup, 19, a nursing student at Cypress College, who was found Dec. 27 with her neck broken in her parked car in a Garden Grove residential area, was connected to the other homicides. Detectives had speculated earlier that the Stallcup and Stoughton murders were linked.

Bastrup said he felt the arrest of the trio had ended a crime spree that had plagued the Anaheim area. The guns confiscated in the trio's stolen car fit the descriptions of weapons used in several robberies, he said.

He said the three defendants live near the Duncan home and fairly near the residence of Miss Stoughton.

Screen cut

Long Beach police said Friday that burglars who cut a screen to enter the home of Elaine K. Norenberg, 2686 E. 56th St., took a stereo and other household items.

Band booster

At the Long Beach Municipal Band concerts last summer, pleas for membership in the Band-Aids, a group supporting the band, were made. After we sent in our money, we never heard another word from this group. Can Action Line find out who its officers are and how much money was collected? Can we deduct our membership fee on our tax return? L.H., Long Beach.

The new booster group for the Long Beach band is a nonprofit organization, but hasn't yet been granted official tax exempt status, from the Internal Revenue Service, so your contribution isn't deductible. The organization's president, Robert Perry, who owns a Long Beach investment firm, said the group is just starting to organize its activities and will begin sending out regular newsletters to all members in the near future. The group plans to promote the band and campaign to keep it a full-time city-subsidized organization. Perry said the group collected $1,200 last year and has spent about $300 on stationery and other office expenses. The membership fee is $1 for an individual, $3 for a family and $25 for a business. Contributions can be sent to the Band-Aids at P.O. Box 3574, Long Beach, Calif. 90803. The organization currently is run by a steering committee composed primarily of business and professional leaders. In addition to Perry, the committee members are Alice and Paul Burbage, Elliott J. Dixon, Donald G. Gill, Whitney A. Halteman, Ronald D. Salk, John Schwartz, Janice Sunshine, Frank Thomas and Charles and Kathy Ward. The Long Beach Municipal Band was formed in 1909 and now costs the city about $500,000 a year. In 1958, an attempt to eliminate the band in an effort to save city funds was defeated by the voters who approved continuation of the band.

Can Action Line tell us who is responsible for the "Great Dominguez Air Meet" deception on Jan. 16. According to a story in the I, P-T, the Dominguez Seminary's commemoration of the Dominguez Field Air Show, which was held on that site in 1910, would be open to the public. Yet we were stopped at the main gate of the seminary and told we could not enter without a pass or an invitation. It is very unfair to read in the paper that the event is open to the public and then be turned away because we weren't one of the privileged few with invitations. C.F., Long Beach.

The event was open to the public, but parking on the seminary's grounds was restricted to invited guests who arrived early, according to a spokesman for the Dominguez Seminary. "The sheriff's department informed us that we could have only so many cars parked on the grounds for safety reasons, so we had to tell even some of the invited guests who arrived later that they must park outside and walk in," the spokesman said. He added that you should have been told only that you must park outside, not that you couldn't attend the ceremonies without an invitation. More than 2,000 persons attended the event.

SOUND OFF!

I work in the Bank of California Building on the corner of Ocean Boulevard and Magnolia Avenue across the street from the courts and police buildings. Many times, I use Magnolia as an access to Broadway in order to avoid the congested traffic on Ocean going east. Since the completion of the new parking structure on Magnolia, driving down that street has become much like a game of dodge ball only the balls are replaced by pedestrians darting across the middle of the street toward the parking area. Last night, I nearly hit a gentleman who had made an attempt to cross the street and was blocked by oncoming traffic and had to stop in the middle. Unless the laws have changed, crossing in the middle of the block is illegal and quite dangerous as illustrated by my experience. It seems to me that since the police are in such close proximity, perhaps they should patrol that area for a while, reminding pedestrians to please use the crosswalks and signals as an aid to both themselves and the drivers using that street. P.B., Long Beach.

SANTA MONICA (AP) — A man has been arrested after authorities confiscated a large quantity of weapons at his business here, but police said Friday there is no evidence the cache is related to other munitions recently discovered in Southern California.

Police said Walter Tallmadge, 44, of Santa Monica, was booked for investigation of possession of illegal weapons, a misdemeanor, after a "substantial" quantity of munitions was found at his company, Datal Industries, which manufactures model railroad equipment.

The arsenal included a .50-caliber machine gun, 20 rifles, 15 handguns, 40,000 firecrackers, 900 feet of fuse wire, and several 'Ethics' could hurt, says boss of Lockheed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — American business might suffer if foreign companies make "facilitating payments" to help win overseas contracts while U.S. firms do not, the chairman of Lockheed Aircraft Corp. said Friday.

"To what extent will American corporations be prejudiced if they adhere to a code of ethics which is treated cavalierly by corporations overseas?" asked board chairman Robert Haack. "I don't know."

LOCKHEED, burned 18 months ago by disclosures that it had paid $25 million in bribes to foreign officials to promote business contracts over a seven-year period, is currently conducting a "worldwide, impartial, painstaking" internal investigation of its past practices, Haack said.

"Lockheed is making no payments of any kind, anywhere, of any sort," the interim board chairman said. "But the problem is not black and white and not privy to a 'pen in hand' solution."

Haack said it is a problem when U.S. companies say "we will be absolutely lily white" while foreign firms are continuing to make payments which are not improper in "parts of the world which have a different set of values, mores and practices."

He told a news conference it is "a distinct possibility" that jobs and money will be lost and the balance of payments adversely affected if domestic corporations are at a disadvantage in international competition.

While warning of the damaging impact of the ban on foreign payoffs, he said that for "some unexcusable reason" Lockheed reached a new high in foreign business in 1976, despite the fact that, "Girl Scouts' honor, we have not paid a dime."

For liquefied gas Brown tries to speed terminal

EL MONTE (AP) — Gov. Brown is attempting to speed up the sluggish process of approving construction of a liquefied natural gas terminal, a top aide said Friday.

Tom Quinn, chairman of the State Air Resources Board, said Brown thinks the problem is too serious for the normal process, which can take years.

"I don't think anyone really likes the idea of (liquefied) natural gas, but we just don't have any choice," said Quinn.

"If we don't locate a terminal somewhere in California and have it operating by 1981, we're going to run out of natural gas and have unemployment such as we've never seen in the state."

Pacific Lighting Co. is seeking authority to build a terminal for Alaskan gas on Terminal Island. Such permission must come from a number of state and local agencies.

The Los Angeles City Council, which must give its approval, has postponed action until after the April 5 primary election. Assemblyman Terry Goggin, D-San Bernardino, is pushing legislation which would prevent construction of the terminal.

Southland water from north reduced by half

Water flowing south into Metropolitan Water District reservoirs has been cut in half in order to relieve drought-stricken areas in Northern California, MWD officials said in Los Angeles Friday.

Instead, the district has begun pumping water at the full capacity of a billion gallons a day through its Colorado River Aqueduct, said general manager John H. Lauten.

Lauten said the cutback would free up to 400,000 acre-feet of water for use north of the Tehachapi Mountains. The district will draw only half of the 800,000 acre-feet it had planned to draw from the State Water Project this year. An acre-foot is nearly 325,000 gallons.

Ocean scientists saw winter born

LA JOLLA (AP) — Ocean scientists say they may have witnessed the birth of the nation's great winter of 1977 a year ago.

The onset of an El Nino — the warm ocean current which sweeps up periodically along the coast of South America — was noticed by researchers at Scripps Institution of Oceanography.

By last August, the waters of the north-central Pacific Ocean were abnormally cold.

By December, meteorologist Jerome Namias of Scripps was convinced that the Midwest and East were in for their worst winter in decades.

"IT MAY MARK A tendency to more cold winters in the central and eastern portions of the nation, especially relative to the past five years," says Dr. Namias, who once was chief of the Extended Forecast Division of the National Weather Service.

But, he says in a report this week, "there is no reason for assuming that this abnormal winter marks the beginning of an ice age."

The Scripps weather scientists say that ever since 1971 winter has been marked by a large pool of warm water in the north-central Pacific and a large pool of cold water lying off the coast of western North America.

The condition, they say, has allowed the general atmospheric circulation to move across the United States in a gentle, undulating pattern. Cold and warm pools of water unexplainably changed their normal roles.

Carter calls Warnke's confirmation 'crucial'

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — President Carter said Friday that Senate confirmation of Paul C. Warnke as his chief arms control negotiator was "crucial" to his administration.

Repeating his strong backing for Warnke's nomination as director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency and chief strategic arms negotiator with the Russians — despite some Senate opposition — Carter was reported to have called Warnke "thoroughly and totally qualified."

HEARINGS ON the nomination will begin Tuesday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The Senate Armed Services Committee, some of whose members have raised questions about Warnke, may also hold a hearing.

A count by Capitol Hill observers Friday showed Warnke with overwhelming numerical support although with criticism from some senators that the administration was not concerned enough about Soviet military strength.

This concern was fueled by a widely circulated memorandum that included Warnke's well-known views advocating arms control measures, including some effort to promote reciprocal unilateral gestures by the United States and the Soviet Union.

It was reported that the memorandum had been prepared by the Washington-based Coalition for a Democratic Majority, which has advocated tougher positions toward the Russians. Its co-chairman, Ben Wattenberg, is a close adviser to Sen. Henry M. Jackson.

D-Wash., one of those who has questioned Warnke's being named to the administration.

Warnke, a former senior official in the Pentagon, is a partner in a Washington law firm headed by Clark M. Clifford. He is well known in Democratic political circles and does not face the kind of widespread opposition that forced Theodore C. Sorensen to withdraw as Carter's nominee for CIA director.

In another matter, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said the United States would not link the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) with human rights issues in the Soviet Union or other subjects.

HE WAS ASKED Thursday whether there was any "linkage" between human rights questions and other relations such as trade, economics and arms talks.

"No, there is no linkage," he said. "I think each of these subjects is an important subject and each should be discussed on its own footing."

The term "linkage" was used repeatedly in the administration of former President Nixon and was a deliberate policy of former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. He linked, for instance, American trade concessions with Soviet political restraint in Berlin and the Middle East. And because of Soviet military involvement in Angola, Kissinger put a freeze on high-level contacts and economic projects.

But the strategic arms talks were regarded as too important for linkage.

CBS, Cronkite to air Oval Office talk show

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — You're going to have to get through Walter Cronkite if you hope to talk to President Carter on the phone.

At least that's the way it's shaping up as White House and Columbia Broadcasting System officials are huddling to work out the final details on Carter's much-heralded appearance on a radio talk show.

The details probably won't be announced for awhile and the show may not be aired for several weeks.

But Barry Jagoda, Carter's media adviser who has charge of putting the show together, envisions a one- to two-hour session in the Oval Office, with Americans telephoning their questions and comments to their new President.

Carter aides had been thinking of putting the President on a radio talk show since right after the election, so when Richard Salant, CBS president, offered his radio network as the forum, there was no hesitation in accepting.

Carter loyalists couldn't have framed a better proposal for the President than the one offered by CBS.

Cronkite, the television anchorman who pollsters say is one of the most trusted men in America, will be there to preside.

"Can you imagine the most trusted man in America being the one to put his foot on the neck of a nut when he calls in," said one White House aide, gleefully.

There was concern about how to handle callers who were not serious or who obviously just wanted to lecture, but the CBS offers eliminated all the fear. The last thing Carter wanted from his talk show appearance was to have callers complaining that they were being screened by government officials.

"There obviously is some positive public relations value in this," said Jagoda defensively. "But it's not being done for that purpose."

"It's being done to fulfill a campaign promise to stay close to the people and keep in touch with them."

CBS-TV is not interested in carrying the event, said Jagoda, but he and other Carter aides now are considering a request from the public television network to carry the entire show live. Presumably Walter Cronkite wouldn't object.

Conservative leaders rule out third party movement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of the conservative political movement said Friday a third party probably wouldn't work and their best chances lie in a revamped Republican Party.

"We really don't have the reasons historically to move in a third party direction at this point,"

said Young Americans for Freedom Chairman Jeffrey Kane.

"We simply don't have a burning issue," Kane said, "and we don't have a leader to do it."

Kane's comments at a news conference reflect research done for Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., which concluded that a third party bolt would face severe mechanical and philosophical problems.

During a conference panel, Rep. Phillip Crane, R-Ill., said the organizational problems of creating a new party and the new federal election laws favoring the two major established parties would be insurmountable.

No fast shift in housing policy seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's administration does not plan any immediate major overhauls of the housing programs it inherited, top housing officials said Friday.

The changes targeted by housing officials after two weeks of the new administration basically involve differences of degree and emphasis, focusing greater federal aid on the poor and elderly.

And in line with Carter's campaign promises, the administration plans to revive targets for housing production, with the federal government standing by to take up any slack by subsidizing construction if necessary. The specific target hasn't been set yet.

Specific targets generally had been discarded in the administrations of former Presidents Nixon and Ford, when officials argued that the impact of general economic conditions was too powerful for the government to counteract.

Patricia Roberts Harris, secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, has been among the slowest of the Cabinet officers in selecting people to fill top policy posts, and some housing and urban affairs groups have complained of confusion within the department.

Mrs. Harris' intentions to make no major revisions in either the subsidized housing program or community development block grant programs initiated by Republicans result from her desire to avoid "stop-and-go housing programs."

She is understood to be mapping plans, however, to seek more aid than proposed by Ford for low-income housing. And HUD is weighing some changes in the formula for distributing funds to cities and metropolitan areas to channel more money to areas with high concentrations of poor people and older housing.

Mrs. Harris had earlier announced that HUD would increase federal payments to subsidized housing projects to cover fuel bill increases and had ordered HUD officials to survey federally held housing projects which had defaulted on their mortgages to find any vacant, heated housing units. And on Friday she announced a three-month suspension on all eviction actions now in progress on federally held units.

Carter calls Warnke's confirmation 'crucial'

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — President Carter said Friday that Senate confirmation of Paul C. Warnke as his chief arms control negotiator was "crucial" to his administration.

Repeating his strong backing for Warnke's nomination as director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency and chief strategic arms negotiator with the Russians — despite some Senate opposition — Carter was reported to have called Warnke "thoroughly and totally qualified."

HEARINGS on the nomination will begin Tuesday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The Senate Armed Services Committee, some of whose members have raised questions about Warnke, may also hold a hearing.

A count by Capitol Hill observers Friday showed Warnke with overwhelming numerical support although with criticism from some senators that the administration was not concerned enough about Soviet military strength.

This concern was fueled by a widely circulated memorandum that included Warnke's well-known views advocating arms control measures, including some effort to promote reciprocal unilateral gestures by the United States and the Soviet Union.

It was reported that the memorandum had been prepared by the Washington-based Coalition for a Democratic Majority, which has advocated tougher positions toward the Russians. Its co-chairman, Ben Wattenberg, is a close adviser to Sen. Henry M. Jackson,

D-Wash., one of those who has questioned Warnke's being named to the administration.

Warnke, a former senior official in the Pentagon, is a partner in a Washington law firm headed by Clark M. Clifford. He is well known in Democratic political circles and does not face the kind of widespread opposition that forced Theodore C. Sorensen to withdraw as Carter's nominee for CIA director.

In another matter, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said the United States would not link the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) with human rights issues in the Soviet Union or other subjects.

HE WAS ASKED Thursday whether there was any "linkage" between human rights questions and other relations such as trade, economics and arms talks.

"No, there is no linkage," he said. "I think each of these subjects is an important subject and each should be discussed on its own footing."

The term "linkage" was used repeatedly in the administration of former President Nixon and was a deliberate policy of former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. He linked, for instance, American trade concessions with Soviet political restraint in Berlin and the Middle East. And because of Kissinger put a freeze on high-level contacts and economic projects.

But the strategic arms talks were regarded as too important for linkage.

CBS, Cronkite to air Oval Office talk show

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — You're going to have to get through Walter Cronkite if you hope to talk to President Carter on the phone.

At least that's the way it's shaping up as White House and Columbia Broadcasting System officials are huddling to work out the final details on Carter's much-heralded appearance on a radio talk show.

The details probably won't be announced for awhile and the show may not be aired for several weeks.

But Barry Jagoda, Carter's media adviser who has charge of putting the show together, envisions a one- to two-hour session in the Oval Office, with Americans telephoning their questions and comments to their new President.

Carter aides had been thinking of putting the President on a radio talk show since right after the election, so when Richard Salant, CBS president, offered his radio network as the forum, there was no hesitation in accepting.

Carter loyalists couldn't have framed a better proposal for the President than the one offered by CBS.

Cronkite, the television anchorman

who pollsters say is one of the most trusted men in America, will be there to preside.

"Can you imagine the most trusted man in America being the one to put his foot on the neck of a nut when he calls in," said one White House aide, gleefully.

There was concern about how to handle callers who were not serious or who obviously just wanted to lecture, but the CBS offers eliminated all the fear. The last thing Carter wanted from his talk show appearance was to have callers complaining that they were being screened by government officials.

"There obviously is some positive public relations value in this," said Jagoda defensively. "But it's not being done for that purpose."

"It's being done to fulfill a campaign promise to stay close to the people and keep in touch with them."

CBS-TV is not interested in carrying the event, said Jagoda, but he and other Carter aides now are considering a request from the public television network to carry the entire show live. Presumably Walter Cronkite wouldn't object.

Conservative leaders rule out third party movement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of the conservative political movement said Friday a third party probably wouldn't work and their best chances lie in a revamped Republican Party.

"We really don't have the reasons historically to move in a third party direction at this point,"

said Young Americans for Freedom Chairman Jeffrey Kane.

"We simply don't have a burning issue," Kane said, "and we don't have a leader to do it."

Kane's comments at a news conference reflect research done for Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., which concluded that a third party bolt would face severe mechanical and philosophical problems.

During a conference panel, Rep. Phillip Crane, R-Ind., said the organizational problems of creating a new party and the new federal election laws favoring the two major established parties would be insurmountable.

No fast shift in housing policy seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's administration does not plan any immediate major overhauls of the housing programs it inherited, top housing officials said Friday.

The changes targeted by housing officials after two weeks of the new administration basically involve differences of degree and emphasis, focusing greater federal aid on the poor and elderly.

And in line with Carter's campaign promises, the administration plans to revive targets for housing production, with the federal government standing by to take up any slack by subsidizing construction if necessary. The specific target hasn't been set yet.

Specific targets generally had been discarded in the administrations of former Presidents Nixon and Ford, when officials argued that the impact of general economic conditions was too powerful for the government to counteract.

Patricia Roberts Harris, secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, has been among the slowest of the Cabinet officers in selecting people to fill top policy posts, and some housing and urban affairs groups have complained of confusion within the department. Mrs. Harris' intentions to make no major revisions in either the subsidized housing program or community development block grant programs initiated by Republicans result from her desire to avoid "stop-and-go" housing programs.

She is understood to be mapping plans, however, to seek more aid than proposed by Ford for low-income housing. And HUD is weighing some changes in the formula for distributing funds to cities and metropolitan areas to channel more money to areas with high concentrations of poor people and older housing. Mrs. Harris had earlier announced that HUD would increase federal payments to subsidized housing projects to cover fuel bill increases and had ordered HUD officials to survey federally held housing projects which had defaulted on their mortgages to find any vacant, heated housing units. And on Friday she announced a three-month suspension on all eviction actions now in progress on federally held units.

Carter weighs plan to pay poor's fuel bills

By EDWARD COWAN
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration is considering a request to Congress for emergency funds to pay fuel bills of poor families, especially those threatened with a cutoff of electricity, gas or oil for nonpayment.

One version of the plan drafted by the Community Services Administration contemplates payments of up to $250 a household, and more in exceptional cases.

White House sources said that Carter was committed to some form of relief for poor persons faced with big fuel bills, but that he had not settled on a method of help. Nor, the sources added, had Carter determined that he could justify asking Congress for an emergency appropriation of as much as $200 million.

Heating bills have soared this winter because of prolonged, deep cold and, to a lesser extent, higher fuel prices. One of the bitter ironies of the winter has been that heating bills may have gone up most for the poorest families, those living in substandard housing with little or no insulation and the greatest vulnerability to cold.

A Library of Congress analysis estimated the additional cost of heating at $139, but reports coming to the government and hearings before Congress point to increases that are much larger in some cases.

Under the permanent authorization for "crisis intervention" payments through state offices and local community action agencies, eligibility is confined to families with income of no more than 125 per cent of the poverty standard. For an urban family of four the standard is $5,500 and 125 per cent of that would be $6,875.

Bills would be paid directly by local or state agencies. In addition, congressional aides believe that some small additional amounts of cash should be available for direct disbursement to consumers, for example, rural residents of Maine who heat with kerosene and typically by only a few gallons at a time.

The emergency relief plan was proposed to Carter on Jan. 28 by two Democratic senators, Edmund C. Muskie of Maine and Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

Adopted persons 'have no right to parents' identity'

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A judge ruled Friday that adopted persons have no constitutional right to the identity of their natural parents, but he eased some restrictive rules that stop people from discovering their roots.

Superior Court Judge Philip Gruccio said adopted persons who go to court to seek their parents have a "compelling psychological need" to know their origins.

He set guidelines by which adoption agencies must search for natural parents and prove that information of their identities would be harmful to either parent or offspring.

Gruccio's decision was handed down after four adults sued the state of New Jersey to release their original birth certificates, which under law are sealed after a child is adopted.

In New Jersey, as in most states, it takes a court order to break the seal. State officials feel releasing the birth certificates would violate the natural parents' right of privacy.

In his 27-page decision, Gruccio said the state guarantees secrecy of the natural parents' "actions and motivations" when the children are adopted as infants.

"Assured of this knowledge by the state, the natural parents are free to move on and attempt to rebuild their lives," he said.

The judge said the secrecy also allows the adopting parents to raise the child "without fear of interference from the natural parent" and without fear that the illegitimacy of a child will be revealed.

But the judge said adopted persons, especially adults, who go to court to seek their original birth certificates are "impelled by a need to know which is far deeper than mere curiosity."

In cases of adult adoptees, Gruccio ruled, access to original birth records would be automatic if natural parents agree after being consulted by original adoption agencies.

If natural parents object, adoption agencies must judge whether releasing their identities would cause harm to the parents or the adopted person, he said.

Gruccio ruled that adopted persons may appeal to the state courts for further action if the adoption agency is no longer in existence, if it fails to locate the natural parent, or if he believes a search for the natural parents is not thorough.

He said the guidelines do not apply to persons under 18, who must use present procedures and prove why they need to know the identity of their natural parents.

Dog's death was exaggerated . . .

Knight News Service

NEW YORK — A Brooklyn veterinarian has agreed to pay $2,000 to a woman who charged that she paid to have her German shepherd cremated — only to discover two weeks later that the dog was alive and well on Staten Island.

Helen Muller brought suit in Brooklyn Civil Court against the vet, Dr. Anthony Sakal, and his brother-in-law, Jeff Jones, who arranged cremations. The pair, whom Mrs. Muller charged with fraud and breach of contract, settled in court on Thursday, the third day of the jury trial.

Mrs. Muller explained that in February 1975 she took her pedigree pup, Bruno, to Sakal, requesting that the dog be "put to sleep" because he was suffering from an incurable disease — bilateral hip dysplasia. She said she paid the vet $15.

Two weeks later, Bruno was found on Staten Island, still wearing a collar which was marked inside with her address, Mrs. Muller said.

The dog was returned by the girl who found it, and a week later Mrs. Muller said she received a bill from Ald State Crematory for $75. She was promised Bruno's ashes upon payment.

Bruno was finally put to death about six months later because, Mrs. Muller explained, "his body just couldn't keep going any longer. He was dropping."

Fitzsimmons' son indicted by grand jury

DETROIT (AP) — Richard Fitzsimmons, son of Teamsters Union President Frank Fitzsimmons, was indicted Friday on charges of embezzlement and conspiracy in connection with a union severance fund.

Fitzsimmons and two other men were indicted by the same federal grand jury which is investigating the disappearance of ex-Teamsters boss James R. Hoffa.

Arrestment was set for Monday.

13-cent stamp will stick—for a while

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service has canceled plans to raise the cost of mailing a letter from 13 cents to 16 or 17 cents later this year, postal sources say.

The Postal Service changed its mind because of continuing improvement in the agency's financial picture, the sources said Thursday. They said the Postal Service soon will announce a surplus for the second consecutive quarter.

Previously, the Postal Service was a consistent money loser, amassing nearly $3 billion in deficits during the preceding five years.

The mail agency already had announced a $15 million surplus for July through September 1976. The size of the latest quarterly surplus, for October through December, could not be learned, but Postal Service financial data show a $36.3-million surplus between Oct. 9 and Dec. 3. This compares with a $289-million loss during the same period of the previous year.

Postal officials attributed the July-September profit mainly to a reduction through attrition of the number of postal workers on the payroll. They also cited a continued small increase in mail volume during the period.

Before the unexpected financial improvement, postal officials had expected to ask the Postal Rate Commission for higher rates, effective next fall. But the sources said the surpluses will make an increase unnecessary this year.

The sources stressed that further deficits are expected because of anticipated increases in the cost of mail service. Pay increases are built into existing labor agreements, and officials expect cost increases due to inflation, especially in fuel costs.

"We are not out of the woods yet. But obviously there has been a significant brightening of the financial picture," an official said.

may fall short, but it said the emergency energy law will help.

"But we still must go out and find it, contract for it and arrange for shipment," a company spokesman said. "Everybody in the East is after the same gas, but there ain't a whole lot out there."

The National Weather Service said temperatures in the eastern United States were at near-normal levels. Then, Friday afternoon, the Weather Service issued a special report predicting blizzard conditions in western New York today and Sunday. Wind chill temperatures could reach minus 30, the report stated.

New York Gov. Hugh Carey's office announced that more than 1,000 schools, closed this week because of the natural gas shortage, will be allowed to reopen next week. More than half a million pupils were involved.

There was no word on when closed industries would reopen. On a nationwide basis, the number of layoffs blamed on the cold weather and resulting natural gas shortage has been estimated at 1.5 million. The number of reported deaths due to the cold was near 100.

The situation was just about as bad in parts of West Virginia. Preston County is suffering what the National Weather Service calls the worst winter in 75 to 100 years. There was more snow Friday, boosting the total winter snowfall to nearly 200 inches.

Richard Wolfe, Preston's director of emergency services, said his part-time office has been on overtime for several weeks, directing snow removal and rescue operations.

"IT'S BEEN a losing battle," said Wolfe. "As soon as we get a road cleared, the wind shifts the snow and buries it again. We thought the weather was improving yesterday, but now we're starting the cycle over again — making deliveries of food and fuel to the same people a second time."

The perverse winter weather could cost Americans as much as $15 billion in personal income, congressmen studying President Carter's economic stimulus program were told Friday.

GM auto parts snowbound; South Gate plant shut down

Delays in getting parts from the snowbound East Coast have forced a week-long closure of the General Motors Corp. assembly plant in South Gate, company officials announced Friday.

A spokesman said approximately 2,600 workers will be laid off during the plant closure from Monday through next Friday, with the facility set to reopen Feb. 14.

Workers with seniority will receive about 95 per cent of their regular pay through state and supplemental unemployment benefits during the week, he added.

boost stage, after it leaves the atmosphere.

However, Garwin said, a satellite-based beam would have to contend with the earth's magnetic field, which would deflect particles from an intended target. "The problems tend to vitiate the possibility," he remarked.

Garwin said theoretical studies had also investigated the use of neutral hydrogen atoms to form weapon beams based on satellites, thereby avoiding the magnetic field problem. But he said small amounts of gas in the thin upper atmosphere would neutralize the hydrogen atom beam.

The Army's interest in particle beams was spurred in the last few years by the theoretical possibility of using them to protect U.S. strategic Minuteman missile silos against increasingly accurate Soviet missiles, intelligence officials said. Research is going on principally at the Ballistic Missile Defense Program Office in Huntsville, Ala.

They said the Navy's interest was stimulated by the possibility of using particle beams to defend aircraft carriers against Soviet cruise missiles — low-flying, jet-powered drones.

The intelligence officials pointed out that the Soviet Union had also invested heavily in laser beams for potential weapons use. Western intelligence officials recently reported that the Soviet Union had deployed laser beams for knocking out reconnaissance satellites.

Lasers, as distinct from particle beams, are highly concentrated and organized beams of light particles called photons.

The officials said there was a sharp debate between American military and civilian intelligence specialists on the significance of the Soviet particle-beam program.

The military analysts contend that their information indicates the Soviet Union intends to have a particle beam ready for testing later this year, and operational by 1985. Civilian analysts in the Central Intelligence Agency dispute this contention.

Friday evening, in response to press queries about particle beams, the Defense Department issued the following statement:

"The Soviets are conducting research and development in several areas involving a wide range of technology. There is no consensus on what successes they might achieve in the next several years in these areas of new technology. For security reasons, we cannot discuss the specifics of Soviet research and development activity."

Wolfgang K. H. Panofsky, a physicist who directs the Stanford Linear Accelerator Laboratory and who is familiar with particle-beam studies in both the U.S. and the Soviet Union, said in a telephone interview: "I know of no evidence that the Russians are working on such a thing."

He and Garwin acknowledged that the Soviet Union had developed large particle accelerators and were engaged in a lot of experimental work with them.

Reports and rumors about particle-beam weapons have been circulating in the Washington journalistic community for several months, and intelligence officials have told inquiring newsmen that the subject was too sensitive to discuss in detail.

Disagreements between military and civilian analysts on the importance of particle beams apparently prompted officials to lift a corner of the blanket of secrecy covering the subject.

Carter asks for power 'to streamline government'

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a first step to redeem a major campaign promise, President Carter asked Congress on Friday for four-year authority to reorganize the federal bureaucracy, subject to vetoes by either the Senate or House.

Carter said the plan would provide "an efficient way for Congress and the President to work together to streamline our government."

The legislation would authorize Carter to propose reorganization plans that would automatically take effect unless vetoed by either branch of Congress within 60 days.

THE PRESIDENT'S blueprint would permit him, subject to veto, to transfer all or part of an agency's functions to another, abolish functions, consolidate activities of several agencies and change agency names. He could neither create nor abolish Cabinet departments, nor could he consolidate two or more departments into one.

"I hope the Congress will act soon on this legislation, so our work of reorganization can begin," Carter said in a special message to Congress.

The President told reporters at the White House that "this is a commitment that I made in hundreds of speeches around the country during the two-year campaign. It was one of the major reasons I was elected."

If Congress grants him the authority he seeks, Carter said, "I will move aggressively, but also carefully, work closely with Congress and make changes that will be of benefit to all of us in administering the affairs of the people of this country."

During the campaign, Carter said he thought "the present 1,900 federal departments can be reduced to no more than 200, with a great savings in tax money and a streamlining of services to our people."

Asked if Carter still had 200 departments and agencies as a reorganization goal, White House Press

Secretary Jody Powell said, "Nothing has certainly changed since the campaign."

But he emphasized that any resulting personnel reductions would be achieved through attrition and not firings.

Meanwhile, Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, said he will introduce a bill Monday permitting changes in the executive branch only if Congress votes its express approval.

Presidents had reorganization powers similar to what Carter is asking under a law that was permitted to expire in 1973 because of congressional fears at the time about possible moves by then-President Richard M. Nixon to centralize federal authority in the White House.

"Renewing this executive reorganization authority," Carter told Congress, "will help build the public's confidence in government, redeem commitments made to the electorate and prove to the people who have given us their trust that we are ready to make a fresh start."

CIA 'deterred JFK slaying speculation'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Central Intelligence Agency directed its offices around the world in 1967 "to employ propaganda assets" to counter doubts raised by critics of the Warren Commission's investigation into the assassination of President Kennedy.

The propaganda campaign was to be waged in part by passing unclassified information about the assassination to CIA "assets" who could use the material in writing "book reviews and feature articles" that would "answer and refute the attacks of the critics," according to a newly released CIA document.

THE DOCUMENT said its aim was "to provide material for countering and discrediting the claims of the conspiracy theorists, so as to inhibit the circulation of such claims in other countries."

The document was among some 850 pages of material released Friday by the CIA under the Freedom of Information Act.

The documents show that the CIA examined copies of almost all books about the November, 1963, assassination, including one by then-Congressman Gerald R. Ford. A CIA officer called Ford's book "a re-hash of the Oswald case" and criticized its "loose" writing.

A Ford chapter rebutting the claim that Lee Harvey Oswald was an FBI agent "is just loose enough to permit quotation out of context," a March, 1965, memo to Richard Helms, then-deputy CIA director for plans, says, adding that "the chapter, as written, could be used by the lefties to continue the campaign of which you are already aware."

Ford was a member of the Warren Commission that concluded Oswald was solely responsible for the assassination. Ford quoted extensively from secret sessions of the commission in his book, titled "Portrait of an Assassin."

MANY OF the documents released deal with internal agency assessments of charges raised by Mark Lane in his book "Rush to Judgment," and by Edward Jay Epstein, in a book called "Inquest," and by former New Orleans Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison, who alleged he had uncovered a conspiracy to assassinate Kennedy.

Anti-ERA Girl Scout leaders burn uniforms

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Two Girl Scout leaders stood in their fashionable neighborhood Friday and burned their uniforms to protest the organization's support of the Equal Rights Amendment.

"It hurts me very deeply to have to do this," said Mary Ann Holman, 44-year-old mother of four and a Girl Scout leader for 18 years, before she dropped her green uniform in a blazing trash can.

Mrs. Holman said she and Dot Schedler, 40-year-old mother of three Girl Scouts, resigned from the group to protest the national board of directors' recent endorsement of the ERA.

"I WISH we had some cookies, we'd throw them in there (the fire) too," said Mrs. Holman, a member of the Lone Star Girl Scout Council board of directors.

Mrs. Holman, whose two daughters were Girl Scouts, said the endorsement was in violation of the Girl Scout Charter, since the group is a non-profit organization and is not supposed to take sides in political issues.

Mrs. Holman's and Mrs. Schedler's daughters are now grown and are no longer in the Girl Scouts.

"I took this action because I've tried to work through the system. But I failed to get enough votes on the local board to support a reprimand of the national board for endorsing a political issue in violation of our charter," Mrs. Holman said.

Wanda Rice, executive director of the Lone Star Girl Scout Council, said the protest was directed at a national issue and would have no bearing on the local group, which she said is not under control of the national board.

"OUR local board has established no position, one way or the other, on the ERA," she said.

ers, National Organization of Women founder Betty Friedan, who is also a member of the national Girl Scout board, are "more and more directing the course of the scouting movement."

In Savannah, Ga., birthplace of American Girl Scout founder Juliette Gordon Lowe, an anti-ERA group called for a boycott of Girl Scout cookies.

Bess Miltiades, a member of the Chatham County Stop ERA committees, said the boycott was aimed at the Girl Scouts' national board and not at the girls themselves.

"We're 100 per cent behind them in their other activities, but we felt this was about the only recourse left to us," she said Friday.

The Stop ERA chapter voted Wednesday night to boycott cookie sales until the national Girl Scout board rescinds its endorsement of the ERA amendment.

"Juliette Gordon Lowe would turn over in her grave if she knew they were using the Girl Scouts for something political," Mrs. Miltiades said. "The national board of directors for the Girl Scouts has no business endorsing something as controversial and political as this."

Consecration weekend slated at Temple Israel

A crowded and highly significant weekend is planned by Temple Israel, Third Street and Loma Avenue. It will involve the consecration of a rabbi to the Temple, a memorial service for an honored rabbi and lectures on Judaism by a distinguished historian.

The consecration of Rabbi Jonathan M. Brown will begin at 8:30 p.m., Friday. Rabbi William Cutter of the Rhea Hirsch School of Education, Hebrew Union College - Jewish Institute of Religion, will deliver the sermon. The Sabbath candles will be blessed by Saragrace Brown.

The Shabbat Yitro will begin at 11 a.m., Saturday, on the theme of "Commandment and Response." It will be followed by a Torah luncheon. The guest speaker will be Dr. Jacob Rader Marcus, director of the American Jewish Archives. His subject will be "The American Jew in the Year 2000."

On Sunday, 8 p.m., Dr. Marcus will deliver the first annual Harvey B. Franklin Memorial Lecture on the topic, "Dawn and the West: the Romance of Jewish Migration." The lecture at the Temple is open to the public without cost.

Rabbi Franklin (1889-1976) became the rabbi at Temple Israel in 1923. He was deeply honored and revered.

RABBI BROWN WITH TORAH

Dr. Marcus is the Distinguished Service Professor and occupant of the Milton and Hattie Kutz Chair of American Jewish History at the Hebrew Union College - Jewish Institute of Religion in Cincinnati. He is the author of many scholarly books on the history of Jews in America and other parts of the world.

Rabbi Brown, 37, is the associate of Rabbi Willi Kaeller at Temple Israel. He is a graduate of Yale University and did graduate study at Hebrew University, Jerusalem, and the Leo Baeck Rabbinical College, London. He was ordained at Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, in 1967.

His greatest concern is the quality of Jewish life lived by Reform Jews. He is especially interested in the quality of marriage and family life. Much of his work centers on helping youth and young couples.

Hymnal denounced as 'impure'

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — A new book of worship and hymnal jointly produced by American Lutheran specialists has been denounced by a group of Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod professors as "doctrinally impure in every way."

The blast came from the faculty of Concordia Seminary here at the work of an inter-Lutheran commission set up in 1965 by four Lutheran denominations, including the Missouri Synod body.

Two of the others, the American Lutheran Church and the Lutheran Church in America, embracing nearly two-thirds of the 9 million U.S. Lutherans, already have given tentative approval to the new book. The fourth body is the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Canada.

Although the 960-page book is tentatively scheduled for final approval and completion by 1978, the Concordia faculty criticized it for accepting "modern higher criticism" of Scriptures and for approving "the so-called ecumenical movement." The Missouri Synod is scheduled to act on the new book at its convention in July in Dallas.

Record high

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Enrollment at the six Southern Baptist theological seminaries this year is at a record high of more than 8,000, about 1,000 more than last year, the denomination reports. Last year's 7,000 total also was about 1,000 ahead of the previous year's 6,000 total.

Mrs. Carter target of 200 protesters at White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 200 opponents of the Equal Rights Amendment marched in front of the White House Friday, protesting Rosalynn Carter's campaign for ERA from the executive mansion.

The sign-carrying demonstrators were led by Phyllis Schlafly of Alton, Ill., national chairman of Stop ERA. The marchers, most of them women, were cheerful and orderly, but serious in telling reporters of their objections to the amendment that has been ratified in 35 states — three less than needed for approval.

Mrs. Schlafly said Mrs. Carter invaded state rights in violation of Article 5 of the Constitution by making calls from the White House to try to persuade legislators in Virginia, Georgia and Indiana to vote for ERA.

"She is using the power of the executive branch of the government" and using her federally-paid secretaries and the White House telephone to make her calls, Mrs. Schlafly said of Mrs. Carter's efforts.

Mary Hoyt, Mrs. Carter's press secretary, told a reporter she did not know if Mrs. Carter saw the demonstration, but that the First Lady was aware of it.

Mrs. Schlafly expressed displeasure that President Carter had made a call to Illinois, but noted that ERA lost there, despite this. She said ERA would have been beaten long ago "if it had not been for all that filthy federal money" that is being used to support it. She predicted that it will be defeated.

"ERA is a fraud," she said, "because it takes away more women's rights that it gives them."

The most colorful demonstrator was Sally Moomjean of Virginia Beach, Va., who was dressed in full clown makeup and costume with a sash saying "Don't Clown Around With ERA." Other signs included: "ERA Will Open a Legal Pandora's Box"; "ERA Means Amy Registers for the Draft at 18"; "Being a Woman is Being Different"; and "Mrs. Carter Stop Shoving ERA Down Our Throats." A huge banner carried by two women read "Equal Rights Amendment Dangerous Fraudulent."

Bishop accused of ties to Nazis loses high post

By GEORGE CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK — A bishop accused of fomenting massacres of Jews during the Nazi era was removed Friday from participation in the National Council of Churches.

Archbishop Valerian Trifa of Grass Lake, Mich., was in effect suspended from functioning on the council's policy-making general board by his own denomination, the Orthodox Church in America.

YIELDING to a wave of protests and the urgings of the interdenominational cooperative body, the church said Archbishop Trifa "will not take part in the council's work" nor attend its meetings until his case is resolved by the courts.

He is charged in U.S.

District Court in Detroit with falsifying his background when he entered the United States in 1950 and when he received U.S. citizenship in 1957 by covering up atrocities against Jews in 1941 as a commander of the pro-Nazi Romanian Iron Guard.

Archbishop Trifa, 62, has denied the accusations.

A constant lift

This column was ordered by a doctor. A physician said, "Why not work a column on how to live with a constant lift?"

I asked what he had in mind and he told me that a large percentage of people who come to him are not basically ill. Instead, they are simply tired and run down, their energy is low. They have lost "come back" power. The doctor went on to say that usually the reason for this condition is not that people work too hard but that they worry too hard. "Anxiety," he said, "always depletes energy more rapidly than hard work."

This statement called to mind the typical hard-driving, hard-driving business executive who had the notion that the world was resting on his shoulders and that, if he wasn't right there on the job, everything would go to pieces.

Finally this man came staggering into his doctor's office, flopped down into a chair and breathlessly said to the doctor, "Doctor, I'm all run down."

The physician looked at him over his spectacles, took out his stethoscope and went through the motions of an examination; he took the executive's blood pressure, looked at his tongue with a depressor, prodded him here and there, and eventually asked, "What did you say was the matter with you?"

"I'm all run down." "You are wrong, all wrong. You are not run down, you are wound up; and when you are wound up you feel run down!"

And isn't that the truth?

How many of us are in the same sad position? With all our activity, we can't seem to master the skill which keeps us from either getting wound up or run down. The Doctor is right. We need to know how to live with a constant lift.

And regardless of this uptight era, it is entirely possible to live with a constant lift, to have a never-ceasing flow of energy into body, mind and spirit. After all, man was created by the Greatest Inventor of all. And this astonishing invention called a human being has qualities which are absolutely marvelous. The body is an amazing interlocking system of nerves and bones and blood vessels incomparable in their intricacy and efficiency. The brain is the most incredible mechanism ever made which not only takes memory pictures but remembers them for years with the exactitude of the day on which they were taken. What other invention can boast the creative genius of the mind?

And, just as no human inventor would create a machine without planning to bring power to it, so the great Creator in His wisdom has made it possible for people to have continuing energy and never to run down. And we have a practical energy formula by which we can obtain this power.

Here is the formula that produces continuing energy: "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength. They shall rise up with wings as eagles."

Have you ever seen an eagle rise? They don't fly like sparrows or lesser birds.

Anti-ERA Girl Scout leaders burn uniforms

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Two Girl Scout leaders stood in their fashionable neighborhood Friday and burned their uniforms to protest the organization's support of the Equal Rights Amendment.

"It hurts me very deeply to have to do this," said Mary Ann Holman, 44-year-old mother of four and a Girl Scout leader for 18 years, before she dropped her green uniform in a blazing trash can.

Mrs. Holman said she and Dot Schedler, 40-year-old mother of three Girl Scouts, resigned from the group to protest the national board of directors' recent endorsement of the ERA.

"I WISH we had some cookies, we'd throw them in there (the fire) too," said Mrs. Holman, a member of the Lone Star Girl Scout Council board of directors.

Mrs. Holman, whose two daughters were Girl Scouts, said the endorsement was in violation of the Girl Scout Charter, since the group is a non-profit organization and is not supposed to take sides in political issues.

Mrs. Holman's and Mrs. Schedler's daughters are now grown and are no longer in the Girl Scouts.

"I took this action because I've tried to work through the system. But I failed to get enough votes on the local board to support a reprimand of the national board for endorsing a political issue in violation of our charter," Mrs. Holman said.

Wanda Rice, executive director of the Lone Star Girl Scout Council, said the protest was directed at a national issue and would have no bearing on the local group, which she said is not under control of the national board.

"OUR local board has established no position, one way or the other, on the ERA," she said.

ers, National Organization of Women founder Betty Friedan, who is also a member of the national Girl Scout board, are "more and more directing the course of the scouting movement."

In Savannah, Ga., birthplace of American Girl Scout founder Juliette Gordon Lowe, an anti-ERA group called for a boycott of Girl Scout cookies.

Bess Miltiades, a member of the Chatham County Stop ERA committee, said the boycott was aimed at the Girl Scouts' national board and not at the girls themselves.

"We're 100 per cent behind them in their other activities, but we felt this was about the only recourse left to us," she said Friday.

The Stop ERA chapter voted Wednesday night to boycott cookie sales until the national Girl Scout board rescinds its endorsement of the ERA amendment.

"Juliette Gordon Lowe would turn over in her grave if she knew they were using the Girl Scouts for something political," Mrs. Miltiades said. "The national board of directors for the Girl Scouts has no business endorsing something as controversial and political as this."

ginia, Georgia and Indiana to vote for ERA.

"She is using the power of the executive branch of the government" and using her federally-paid secretaries and the White House telephone to make her calls, Mrs. Schlafly said of Mrs. Carter's efforts.

Mary Hoyt, Mrs. Carter's press secretary, told a reporter she did not know if Mrs. Carter saw the demonstration, but that the First Lady was aware of it.

Mrs. Schlafly expressed displeasure that President Carter had made a call to Illinois, but noted that ERA lost there, despite this. She said ERA would have been beaten long ago "if it had not been for all that filthy federal money" that is being used to support it. She predicted that it will be defeated.

"ERA is a fraud," she said, "because it takes away more women's rights than it gives them."

The most colorful demonstrator was Sally Moomjean of Virginia Beach, Va., who was dressed in full clown makeup and costume with a sash saying "Don't Clown Around With ERA."

Other signs included: "ERA Will Open a Legal Pandora's Box"; "ERA Means Army Registers for the Draft at 18"; "Being a Woman is Being Different"; and "Mrs. Carter Stop Shoving ERA Down Our Throats." A huge banner carried by two women read "Equal Rights Amendment Dangerous Fraudulent."

Consecration weekend slated at Temple Israel

A crowded and highly significant weekend is planned by Temple Israel, Third Street and Loma Avenue. It will involve the consecration of a rabbi to the Temple, a memorial service for an honored rabbi and lectures on Judaism by a distinguished historian.

The consecration of Rabbi Jonathan M. Brown will begin at 8:30 p.m., Friday. Rabbi William Cutter of the Rhea Hirsch School of Education, Hebrew Union College - Jewish Institute of Religion, will deliver the sermon. The Sabbath candles will be blessed by Saragrace Brown.

The Shabbat Yitro will begin at 11 a.m., Saturday, on the theme of "Commandment and Response." It will be followed by a Torah luncheon. The guest speaker will be Dr. Jacob Rader Marcus, director of the American Jewish Archives. His subject will be "The American Jew in the Year 2000."

On Sunday, 8 p.m., Dr. Marcus will deliver the first annual Harvey B. Franklin Memorial Lecture on the topic, "Dawn and the West: the Romance of Jewish Migration." The lecture at the Temple is open to the public without cost.

Rabbi Franklin (1889-1976) became the rabbi at Temple Israel in 1928. He was deeply honored and revered.

Hymnal denounced as 'impure'

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — A new book of worship and hymnal jointly produced by American Lutheran specialists has been denounced by a group of Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod professors as "doctrinally impure in every way."

The blast came from the faculty of Concordia Seminary here at the work of an inter-Lutheran commission set up in 1965 by four Lutheran denominations, including the Missouri Synod body.

Two of the others, the American Lutheran Church and the Lutheran Church in America, embracing nearly two-thirds of the 9 million U.S. Lutherans, already have given tentative approval to the new book. The fourth body is the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Canada.

Although the 960-page book is tentatively scheduled for final approval and completion by 1978, the Concordia faculty criticized it for accepting "modern higher criticism" of Scriptures and for approving "the so-called ecumenical movement." The Missouri Synod is scheduled to act on the new book at its convention in July in Dallas.

Record high

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Enrollment at the six Southern Baptist theological seminaries this year is at a record high of more than 8,000, about 1,000 more than last year, the denomination reports. Last year's 7,000 total also was about 1,000 ahead of the previous year's 6,000 total.

Bishop accused of ties to Nazis loses high post

By GEORGE CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK — A bishop accused of fomenting massacres of Jews during the Nazi era was removed Friday from participation in the National Council of Churches.

Archbishop Valerian Trifa of Grass Lake, Mich., was in effect suspended from functioning on the council's policy-making general board by his own denomination, the Orthodox Church in America.

YIELDING to a wave of protests and the urgings of the interdenominational cooperative body, the church said Archbishop Trifa "will not take part in the council's work" nor attend its meetings until his case is resolved by the courts.

He is charged in U.S.

Council's Spotlight Awards

SENIOR CITIZEN

Evelyn Skinner at 79 continues to be a dynamo in her lifelong career of helping others. Her pastor, the Rev. Galal Gough, First United Methodist Church, said, "She is truly a saintly person in her devotion and concern for others."

She is a retired school nurse. She worked for eight years in elementary school, 15 years at Poly High and ten years as supervisor of nursing for Long Beach public schools.

At church she has been chairman of the Ruth Circle since 1961. She is a member of the Commission on Church and Society and of the Administrative Board. She drives two carsloads of people to class and church each Sunday. She has a personal concern for people who are ill or shut-in. Even when she had a broken arm she continued her efforts to help others.

In 1975 she received the Volunteer of the Year Award for her work with the Long Beach Society for the Hard of Hearing. She is active in many other church and community groups.

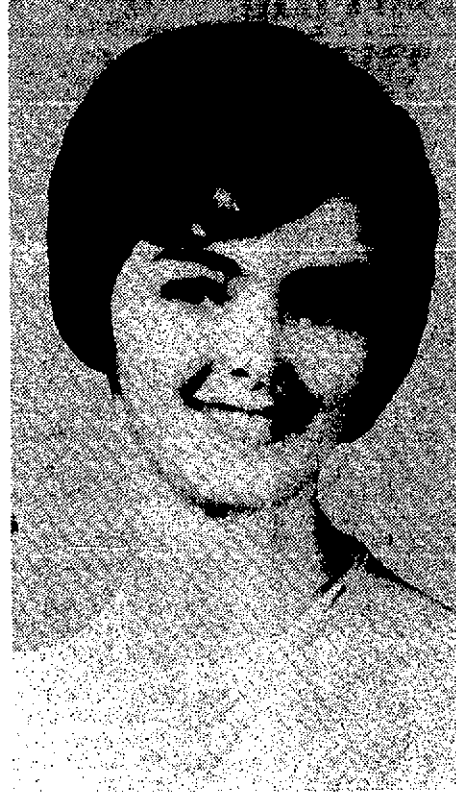

LAYMAN

Ernest Gregory, 70, a layman of Trinity United Methodist Church, thinks his Christian service involves manual labor as well as organizational work. After his retirement as a salesman for Purina he became church gardener. He also serves as usher and general handy man.

But he is also chairman of Christian Social Concerns and Ecumenical Affairs Commission. He has done work for Wesley Service Social Center in Los Angeles and All-Nations Foundation, a social center. He is district representative to the Long Beach District Union of the United Methodist Church. He is president of the board of FISH Organization, general handy man at Hoffman House, involved in Intercity Ministries, and has taken food and clothing to an orphanage in Tijuana.

Rev. James C. Ledgerwood, minister, said: "He is always available to help one in need. He spends most of his retirement time in helping others and is busier than when he was employed at Purina."

LAYWOMAN

Mrs. Marcia Easton, 31, is a faithful worker at North Long Beach Christian Church. She is a Sunday School teacher and superintendent of the Children's Department. Her husband, Gerry, is a deacon. They have two daughters, Charline and Sharon.

She is worship chairman for the Christian Women's Fellowship. She was director of the Vacation Bible School last summer. When someone is needed to accompany and drive a group of young people on a camping trip she always responds.

She has been a delegate to several conventions and to the world convention in Mexico City. She is a driver for "Meals on Wheels." She is active in Church Women United. She is a worker in the Girl Scouts and is now a troop organizer. She is active in the P.T.A. She has done tutoring for children with reading problems. She participates in a number of other programs.

A fellow member said: "As busy as she is, Marcie is the one a young mother would call to come to her home and take care of her two children when she was ill and needed to go to the doctor."

CLERGYMAN

The Rev. Dale Whitney Jr., 34, is pastor of Geneva Presbyterian Church. He has many ecumenical involvements. He works with the Council's Community Action Committee, the Interfaith Committee, the Hunger Walk, the Church Athletic Association, the Ecumenical Task Force on Legislation and the United Campus Ministry Committee. He does campus ministry at LBSU.

He participates in many community projects and encourages church members to do so. He worked on the Bicentennial Committee, has established folk music festivals, has lobbied in Sacramento for the Emergency Food Program, has spoken about "Red-Lining," has worked for the Farm Workers.

He has encouraged his congregation to open its ample rooms to community groups. He has urged members to active participation in services such as FISH, Meals on Wheels, Gray Panthers and Westside Neighborhood Clinic.

He is active in the work of his denomination and serves on many commissions and committees. He was sent to the General Assembly of the church.

'Satisfied customers'

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The pastor of Miami's Central Baptist Church, the Rev. Conrad Willard, last December offered refunds of up to $2,000 to anyone who started tithing—giving 10 per cent of their income to the church—if they were dissatisfied after a week, a month or six months. He says that so far there have been no requests from any of the 4,000 members, among whom tithers have increased 33 per cent to 400. He comments that God apparently has only satisfied customers among tithers.

Firms resist boycotting

NEW YORK (AP)—Fifty-two major U.S. corporations have agreed to resist Arab demands for boycotting Israel, says the American Jewish Congress. It says the pledges were in response to a congress-sponsored shareholder campaign.

The Jewish organization says an additional 42 corporations and banks, most of them engaged in substantial trade with Arab states, are to be asked at 1977 company meetings to disclose their policies on the Arab boycott of Israel and U.S. firms dealing with Israel.

'Satisfied customers'

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The pastor of Miami's Central Baptist Church, the Rev. Conrad Willard, last December offered refunds of up to $2,000 to anyone who started tithing—giving 10 per cent of their income to the church—if they were dissatisfied after a week, a month or six months.

He says that so far there have been no requests from any of the 4,000 members, among whom tithers have increased 33 per cent to 400. He comments that God apparently has only satisfied customers among tithers.

Firms resist boycotting

NEW YORK (AP)—Fifty-two major U.S. corporations have agreed to resist Arab demands for boycotting Israel, says the American Jewish Congress. It says the pledges were in response to a congress-sponsored shareholder campaign.

The Jewish organization says an additional 42 corporations and banks, most of them engaged in substantial trade with Arab states, are to be asked at 1977 company meetings to disclose their policies on the Arab boycott of Israel and U.S. firms dealing with Israel.

Ethiopian victor urges arming for 'socialism'

ADDIS ABABA (AP) — An estimated 200,000 Ethiopians rallied in this capital city Friday to hear Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam, the victor in a bloody government upheaval, call for the arming of "progressives" to protect this country's "socialist revolution."

In an emotional speech Mengistu denounced as "reactionary" plotters the seven members of the ruling military council who were killed Thursday during or after a gun battle between rival factions at the military government's headquarters.

AN official announcement said the seven, including Brig. Gen. Teferi Bante, the council chairman, had tried to mount an uprising against the "progressive" faction in the council led by Mengistu.

Mengistu, first vice chairman of the council, was generally regarded as the strong man behind the military regime for the past two years, and Teferi Bante filled a figurehead role. Though both factions considered themselves Marxist-Leninist, Mengistu's group was viewed as the more radical.

Mengistu called on Ethiopians to join in forming a "workers' party" to continue the social changes begun after the overthrow of the late Emperor Haile Selassie in September 1974.

The colonel accused Teferi Bante and the other dead officers of delaying the arming of "progressive" forces.

IT WAS the third major power struggle within the ruling group since it deposed Selassie.

The city was calm Friday and few troops were out, even at the mass meeting.

The Mengistu faction issued an announcement Thursday saying Teferi Bante and his followers had been "executed." But it was believed they were killed in the brief but heavy exchange of gunfire between the two sides at the former royal palace Thursday morning.

Residents were not informed of the morning's events until the government-owned radio station made a brief announcement at lunchtime. It said an uprising organized by some members of the council had been foiled and that the situation was under control.

That announcement was followed by another in the evening that said Teferi Bante and six others had been "executed" for taking part in a "counter-revolutionary coup d'etat."

The broadcast said the Mengistu faction had discovered a 47-page master plan for the coup and said the plotters intended to install an underground opposition movement, the Ethiopian People's Revolutionary party — EPRP — as the new government.

Costlier coffee seen as 'rust' peril spreads

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A destructive "rust" attacking the coffee plantations of Central America could wipe out thousands of acres of plants and further drive up the record-high world price of coffee.

Coffee is the economic base for most Central American countries, and the spreading disease will pose a difficult choice for their governments: burning every plant in infected areas, or spending millions of dollars in an effort to control it.

THE RUST is a fungus transmitted by tiny wind-borne spores that can be carried to fields miles away by men and machinery. It invaded Nicaragua last November and has already infected 12,946 acres of that country's 266,868-acre coffee region.

There is no doubt the rust will reach the rest of Central America. The question is when and where," said George H. Berg, director of a U.N.-sponsored project for plant protection and quarantine in Central America, Mexico and the Caribbean. No one knows how the rust got to Nicaragua. It originated in Africa, spread across Asia and in 1980 crossed the Atlantic to Brazil. Nicaragua's first attempts to eradicate it have failed.

The governments of Nicaragua and neighboring countries have agreed to invest $20 million in a massive campaign to impede the rust's spread. Some countries have considered stopping all imports from Nicaragua to keep out spore-carrying goods, but they have not yet acted on this proposal.

Coffee experts say the rust usually wipes out 30 per cent of production within three years, the time it takes to destroy individual plants. In some countries 90 per cent of the crop has been lost. Sri Lanka switched from coffee to tea production after the rust ruined its crops.

DR. Dorothy Shaw, an Australian plant scientist who successfully killed off coffee rust in New Guinea in 1965, says the coffee countries must choose between total eradication and undertaking expensive control measures to retard the spread of rust.

"There may be a chance to stop it if it comes through the main ports," Dr. Shaw told a recent conference of government officials and growers in San Salvador. "However, neither you, nor I, nor anyone know where wind-borne spores might land. This is the difficulty I see with El Salvador."

She said eradication can be accomplished only through a scorched-earth policy — using herbicides and fire to destroy all the plants in an infected area.

"Even a delay of one day might be the difference between success or failure of an eradication campaign," she said.

Nicaragua has not yet announced which method it will follow. The other Central American countries have begun a quarantine program at seaports and border crossings, hoping to keep the rust out or at least to discover its presence quickly enough to contain it.

Central America exports about 13 million to 15 million bags of coffee a year, worth about $1.9 billion at current prices and representing about 17 per cent of world production.

Miguel Muyschondt Yude, director general of the Salvadorean Coffee Institute, estimates the growers could lose more than $1 billion if the rust spreads uncontrolled through the Central American isthmus.

"THESE figures don't count the social and political problems that would result from reduced wages and unemployment," he said.

The rust has arrived as Central American growers are enjoying windfall profits from high international prices. Coffee prices in the United States have more than doubled to about $3 a pound because of severe weather problems that cut into production in Brazil and elsewhere over the past two or three years.

In El Salvador, some of these profits have been passed along to pickers, who recently received a 50 per cent wage increase and now make $4 a day.

With queens switch Killer bees to be re-restrained

By ALFONSO CHARDY

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Government experts are preparing to crossbreed Argentina's killer bees with a calmer strain, as the first step in an effort to stop attacks on people and animals.

Swarms of the deadly bees, which originated in Africa, have attacked people four times in tropical northern Argentina so far this year, the same number reported for all of last year.

In one attack, on Jan. 6, bees killed a man on a highway in Tucuman Province. The next day, a swarm of bees attacked people at a burial. No one was reported killed in that episode. A 6-year-old boy died in the first attack in Argentina, in 1975. Scores of farm animals have died.

"First, we will try to replace all queen bees of the African or Africanized variety with calmer bees and then the law will come in with support to ban transfers of bee hives from infested areas to free areas," said Dr. Moises Katzenelson, the chief government entomologist. Various crossbreeding techniques would have to be tried because the African bees often kill other bees.

The bees are descendants of an aggressive strain that escaped from a laboratory in neighboring Brazil in 1956.

That announcement was followed by another in the evening that said Teferi Bante and six others had been "executed" for taking part in a "counter-revolutionary coup d'etat."

The broadcast said the Mengistu faction had discovered a 47-page master plan for the coup and said the plotters intended to install an underground opposition movement, the Ethiopian People's Revolutionary party — EPRP — as the new government.

Costlier coffee seen as 'rust' peril spreads

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A destructive "rust" attacking the coffee plantations of Central America could wipe out thousands of acres of plants and further drive up the record-high world price of coffee.

Coffee is the economic base for most Central American countries, and the spreading disease will pose a difficult choice for their governments: burning every plant in infected areas, or spending millions of dollars in an effort to control it.

THE RUST is a fungus transmitted by tiny wind-borne spores that can be carried to fields miles away by men and machinery. It invaded Nicaragua last November and has already infected 12,946 acres of that country's 266,868-acre coffee region.

"There is no doubt the rust will reach the rest of Central America. The question is when and where," said George H. Berg, director of a U.N.-sponsored project for plant protection and quarantine in Central America, Mexico and the Caribbean. No one knows how the rust got to Nicaragua. It originated in Africa, spread across Asia and in 1960 crossed the Atlantic to Brazil. Nicaragua's first attempts to eradicate it have failed.

The governments of Nicaragua and neighboring countries have agreed to invest $20 million in a massive campaign to impede the rust's spread. Some countries have considered stopping all imports from Nicaragua to keep out spore-carrying goods, but they have not yet acted on this proposal.

Coffee experts say the rust usually wipes out 30 per cent of production within three years, the time it takes to destroy individual plants. In some countries 90 per cent of the crop has been lost. Sri Lanka switched from coffee to tea production after the rust ruined its crops.

DR. Dorothy Shaw, an Australian plant scientist who successfully killed off coffee rust in New Guinea in 1965, says the coffee countries must choose between total eradication and undertaking expensive control measures to retard the spread of rust.

"There may be a chance to stop it if it comes through the main ports," Dr. Shaw told a recent conference of government officials and growers in San Salvador. "However, neither you, nor I, nor anyone know where wind-borne spores might land. This is the difficulty I see with El Salvador."

She said eradication can be accomplished only through a scorched-earth policy — using herbicides and fire to destroy all the plants in an infected area.

"Even a delay of one day might be the difference between success or failure of an eradication campaign," she said.

Nicaragua has not yet announced which method it will follow. The other Central American countries have begun a quarantime program at seaports and border crossings, hoping to keep the rust out or at least to discover its presence quickly enough to contain it.

Central America exports about 13 million to 15 million bags of coffee a year, worth about $1.9 billion at current prices and representing about 17 per cent of world production.

Miguel Muyschondt Yudice, director general of the Salvadorean Coffee Institute, estimates the growers could lose more than $1 billion if the rust spreads uncontrolled through the Central American isthmus.

"THESE figures don't count the social and political problems that would result from reduced wages and unemployment," he said.

The rust has arrived as Central American growers are enjoying windfall profits from high international prices. Coffee prices in the United States have more than doubled to about $3 a pound because of severe weather problems that cut into production in Brazil and elsewhere over the past two or three years.

In El Salvador, some of these profits have been passed along to pickers, who recently received a 50 per cent wage increase and now make $4 a day.

With queens switch Killer bees to be re-restrained

By ALFONSO CHARDY
BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Government experts are preparing to crossbreed Argentina's killer bees with a calmer strain, as the first step in an effort to stop attacks on people and animals.

Swarms of the deadly bees, which originated in Africa, have attacked people four times in tropical northern Argentina so far this year, the same number reported for all of last year.

In one attack, on Jan. 6, bees killed a man on a highway in Tucuman Province. The next day, a swarm of bees attacked people at a burial. No one was reported killed in that episode. A 6-year-old boy died in the first attack in Argentina, in 1975. Scores of farm animals have died.

"First, we will try to replace all queen bees of the African or Africanized variety with calmer bees and then the law will come in with support to ban transfers of bee hives from infested areas to free areas," said Dr. Moises Katzenelson, the chief government entomologist. Various crossbreeding techniques would have to be tried because the African bees often kill other bees.

The bees are descendants of an aggressive strain that escaped from a laboratory in neighboring Brazil in 1956.

Dow notes Gas firms don't see Carter slight gain; bill as long-run solution oils soar

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Energy-related issues provided the stock market its best gains Friday, while the glamour stocks continued to flounder. Superior Oil, up 16 points, was a stand-out as it finished at 254 — its highest price of 1976-77.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average, ahead more than 3 points in midsession, eased toward the closing bell, finishing with a token 0.75 point gain at 947.89.

This brought the decline in the blue-chip Dow to 9 points for the week and to 56 points so far this year.

HOWEVER, the typical issue outperformed the market's most closely watched average Friday as advances outpaced declines by better than a 4-1 ratio.

The sharp rise in Superior Oil, which traded only 14,200 shares, was attributed in part by observers to the relatively small floating supply of this high-price stock.

Superior, an independent oil and gas producer with interests centered in the United States and Canada, carries the highest price of any listed issue except for International Business Machines. Meanwhile, IBM dropped 2 7/8 points to 268 1/4.

Alpha Portland Industries, a cement manufacturer, rose 1 1/4 to 17 1/2 after reporting a sharp advance in fourth-quarter profits. Also, directors voted a dividend of 1 cent, payable in March.

Rio Grande Industries, a holding company for the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad, eased $\frac{1}{2}$ to 23 $\frac{1}{2}$ in response to its announcement of lower fourth-quarter earnings.

HOWEVER, another railroad holding company, the Missouri Pacific Corp., moved up briskly on news of improved profits for the December quarter.

The market continued to cope with several depressants. These included the adverse effect of severe winter weather upon business and worry that President Carter's economic stimulus program might be expanded by Congress and thereby create new inflationary pressures.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange eased to 23.13 million shares from 23.79 million shares.

NEW YORK — "The new natural gas bill," a top pipeline executive in Houston said this week, "is like trying to cure a bullet wound with a Band-Aid. It may help things look a little healthier, but underneath, the guy's still bleeding to death."

On Wednesday, President Carter signed a measure designed to ease the impact of the gas shortage, but even as final details were being hammered out, a consensus was building within the

An inch decides the mile run as Coghlan noses out Walker

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

Some traveling music, Sam. "I've traveled 9,000 in the last five days," Eamonn Coghlan said after learning the final inch to beat Olympic gold medalist John Walker in the featured mile of the Los Angeles Indoor Games at the Forum Friday night.

My body's been through a five-hour time change and back again," Coghlan said.

His point was to refute suggestions that Walker, arriving from New Zealand only eight hours before race time, was travel weary. "I was just as tired as he was," Coghlan said.

Both runners were timed in 4 minutes flat as the Irishman caught Walker at the tape to post his second victory over the Kiwi since the latter won the 1,500 meters at Montreal. It was Coghlan's 16th indoor win in a row.

Steve Riddick, who also has been around a bit lately, won a glossy 60-yard dash, but one of the loudest ovations from the crowd of 14,539 was for hurdler Willie Davenport, who finished second to Dede Cooper of San Jose in the sixties, then announced his retirement.

The three-time Olympian — a one-time gold medalist — is 33.

Long after most of the people had left, Dwight Stones won the high jump on his fourth try at a meet record height of 7-5 1/2 — thanks to some unruly fans in the end zone and meet referee Mort Tenner.

Several "rooters" yelled in mock exertion when Stones was two steps from the bar on his first try. Tenner voided that attempt.

Other highlights included an indoor record in the women's 500 meters by Rosalyn Bryant of th L.A. Mercuries. Her 1:11.8 bettered the 1:12.1 by Brenda Walsh of Canada in 1972.

Terry Albritton of Stanford won the shotput at 70 feet, 6 1/2 inches — the first throw beyond the magic mark this season.

Long Beach State's two-mile relay team of Phillip Winigard

(1:55.6), Larry Hayden (1:57.3), Leonard Ledet (1:54.8) and Howard Keeley (1:57.0) ran away from UCLA to win in school-record time of 7:44.7.

That bettered the record of 7:45.8 set in 1963 by the quartet of Ralph Lee, Darryl Taylor, Steve Tinley and the immortal Tom Jennings, who now heads the Pacific Coast Club team.

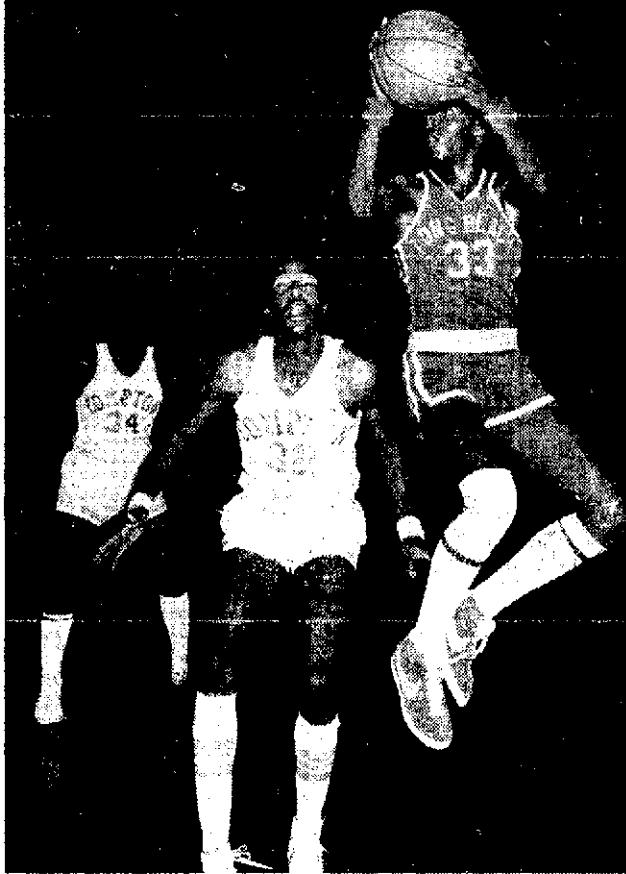

Coghlan, whose strategy is patterned after that of Ron Delany, the great Irish miler of yesteryear, was fifth at the quarter (59.4), third at the half (2:00.7) and still third at three-quarters (3:02.7), always trailing Walker, who took the lead

Gary Mulder hit six of seven free throws in the final 1:24 Friday night as Long Beach City College remained within one game of the Metropolitan Conference lead with a 62-57 win at Valley College.

A boisterous crowd of approximately 250 Valley fans—warned repeatedly by officials not to interfere with the progress of the game—watched Long Beach continue its quest for a fifth consecutive Metro title.

The Vikings shot 48 per cent from the floor on the strength of balanced scoring by Mickey Chislock (13 points), Kenny Scott (10), Mulder (9), Danny Chislock (8) and Following Friday night's game at Long Beach City College, coach Ron Palmer and the Jackrabbits must be wondering what they've done wrong.

Compton, getting 26 points from Purvis Miller, handed Poly its third setback in a row, 48-43, to move into second place in the Moore League.

The victory, "as big as any we've had all year," said coach Eddie Thomas, avenged a 16-point loss the Tarababes suffered at home to Poly two weeks ago.

It was an impressive performance for Compton which, except for Miller, didn't shoot particularly well, yet was able to control the game's tempo.

The Tarababes didn't take the lead until the 2:37 mark of the third quarter, 31-29, but once they did, they didn't permit Poly to get on top again.

"We tried two or three offenses and nothing really worked," said Thomas. "But we were patient. That was the big difference between this game and the last one."

Many Compton fan and even a few from Poly would also say Miller was a big difference.

After Compton hit only 2 of 11 first quarter shots and trailed 9-5, the 6-7 Miller almost single-handedly rallied his team to within two at the half. Of Compton's 16 second-quarter points, Miller had 12. He was successful on a half-dozen shots within 12 feet of the basket.

Miller sank four successive free throws in the game's final 69 seconds to give the Tarababes a 47-41 lead.

Thomas was also quick to praise seldom-used reserves Jose Slaughter and Johnny Jefferson, who played well when Fred Jackson went to the bench with four fouls.

Slaughter had two big baskets in the fourth quarter, one on a drive down the lane when Compton was in its semi-delay game with two minutes to play and holding a precarious 41-40 lead.

His first basket 2:30 into the fourth quarter put Compton on top for good, 39-37. Poly was called for a three second violation on its next possession, then a subsequent foul on Manuel Johnson enabled Melvin Herndon to sink two free throws and give the Tarababes a four-point lead.

Johnson was the only Poly player in double figures with 12 points, including two spectacular first-half tip-ins. But the 6-8 1/2 senior didn't score in the fourth period. No one else was able to pick up the slack.

Poly had only two field goals in the fourth period and shot only 45 per cent from the field. Compton was worse than that at 36 per cent, but had 12 more shots and also hit 12 of 15 free throws.

Compton is now 4-2, two games behind Millikan (6-0), whom the Tarababes get at home Tuesday. Poly is 3-3 and tied with Lakewood for third.

In matching next Tuesday's opponent, Pierce, with a 5-3 record, LBCC held Valley to only 27 field goals (27 of 66)—a shooting percentage of 40.9.

The Vikings hit 14 of 18 opportunities at the free throw line compared to 3 of 6 for Valley.

Despite their defensive expertise, Long Beach was hard pressed to stop Valley's all-purpose forward, Lonnie Buckner. The 6-5 sophomore scored 25 points (11 of 22 from the field) and dominated the backboards. He hauled in 13 rebounds.

A miss by Abdul—and the Lakers

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics held on in a furious fourth-quarter duel to edge the Lakers, 99-98. Friday night as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar missed one of two free throws with six seconds remaining in a National Basketball Association thriller.

The score was tied five times in the fourth period before Jo Jo White put Boston in front 97-95 with 48 seconds to go. Abdul-Jabbar deadlocked the count 97-97 with two free throws after Boston center Dave Cowens fouled out with 37 seconds to play.

Then, with 17 seconds remaining, White, in a bonus situation, missed his first free throw, but cashed the next two to put the Celtics ahead 99-97.

Abdul-Jabbar, who led all scorers with 33 points, was fouled as he received a pass in position for his sky hook. Given two free throws, he missed the first and made the second before the Celtics ran out the clock.

The victory was only the second for the Celtics in their last eight starts. However, it extended their Boston Garden hex over the Lakers to seven games in the last 2 1/2 seasons and knocked them out of a tie with idle Portland for the Pacific Division lead.

John Havlicek topped Boston scorers with 25 points. Fred Saunders had 21 and White 20. Saunders had nine and White eight in the final period.

Cazzie Russell added 20 points for the Lakers.

The Lakers resume their four-game trip Sunday when they play Philadelphia in a nationally televised game.

6,000 see cowboys ridin' and ropin'

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

The majority of cowboys arrive for the Long Beach Rodeo in pickups and campers. Others travel in a style befitting their titles—world champions.

Don Gay landed at L.A. International Airport at 4 p.m. Friday. A little more than 4 1/2 hours later he was trying to stay atop a devilish saddle bronc named Snow Cap.

The Mesquite, Texas, native was unsuccessful, but his ride on Nasty Jack later in the program made the trip worthwhile. His spurring and the bull's temperament earned him 72 points, a share of the lead and the applause from 6,000 fans in the Long Beach Arena.

Bucking, wrestling, roping and riding continue tonight at 8 o'clock and conclude with Sunday's matinee at 2.

"This rodeo is as good as any you'll find in the United States or Canada—except for the National Finals in Oklahoma City," said Gay. He should know.

Last year he competed in 154 events and took home $60,000.

"That's not bad for someone with my qualifications. With only a high school education, I couldn't touch that in any other occupation."

At considerably less than his present 135 pounds, the 5-7 Gay was the smallest man on his high school football team ("I was a defensive end"). While teammates were sorting through scholarship offers, he was already on the rodeo circuit, earning $14,000 as a senior in 1972.

He reached the National Finals, rodeo's combination World Series and Super Bowl, that first season. He placed seventh in bull riding, was runnerup the following year and has been acclaimed world champion ever since.

Glancing at his silver and gold belt buckle and sparkling ring, he said, "These mean a lot more than the money ($12,000 for last year's title) because you spend the money. These you'll always treasure."

Gay was headed toward the exit when another Texan, Butch

There still might be a race in PCAA

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

SAN JOSE — For Long Beach State coach Dwight Jones, the annual road trip to University of Pacific and San Jose State is what college basketball is all about.

"I love this trip," Jones said Friday as his team journeyed from Stockton to Santa Clara, where his 49ers will duel San Jose State tonight.

The Pacific Coast Athletic Association contest, which begins at 8 o'clock, will be played in the 5,000-seat fieldhouse at Independence High School in San Jose.

"THE GAMES on this trip are always a special challenge," said Jones, "and it's especially satisfying when you take the challenge."

The 49ers (5-1) slipped in that department Thursday night, dropping a tough 73-69 decision at Pacific.

They need a victory tonight to remain in control of the PCAA title race.

Playing in Independence Fieldhouse may help the 49ers reach that objective.

In the past, games on this trip have been played in the dreary confines of Stockton Civic Auditorium and either San Jose Civic or tiny Spartan Gym.

WSU: Incentive is there, Puidokas isn't

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

On the eve of today's UCLA-Washington State basketball game, Bruin coach Gene Bartow was still marveling how the Cougars were able to defeat USC Thursday night.

"Imagine, beating the Trojans, 67-65, without Steve Puidokas. Incredible," he said. "That makes our task that much more difficult."

UCLA has not lost to WSU since 1966, never at Pauley Pavilion and shows only five defeats in the 41-game series. But coach George Raveling thinks he might have his best of five Cougar clubs—and the fact WSU trails the Bruins by only one game in the Pacific-8 Conference standings is powerful incentive.

Raveling has the rare distinction of being the only coach who will have to prepare for the Bruins in successive games, this afternoon and again next Thursday night in Pullman.

"If I can survive back-to-back games with the Bruins, then I can survive anything in life," says the talkative coach. He did get one wish, allowing Washington to "go in and soften up the Bruins."

Trojans are favored — to lose their 22nd

USC faces the prospect of its 22nd consecutive Pacific-8 Conference basketball defeat when it faces Washington tonight at 8 in the L.A. Sports Arena.

The Huskies, knocked out of a first-place tie in the conference by UCLA Thursday night at Pauley Pavilion, are heavy favorites to beat the Trojans, who haven't won a league game since February of 1975.

Washington is 4-2 in the league and has won 13 of its last 15 games for an over-all record of 13-6.

USC is 0-4 in Pacific-8 competition and 4-14 for the season. The Trojans blew a 12-point lead over Washington State in the second half Thursday night and sustained their 21st successive league loss, 67-65.

January ambles to Hawaii lead; Nicklaus misses cut

HONOLULU (AP) — Don January, the slow-moving, softly drawing self-styled "Old Folks" of the pro tour, had to shoot an almost errorless eight-under-par 64 Friday to take the second-round lead in the $240,000 Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament.

"One helluva round for me," said the 47-year-old January, the comeback king who once quit the game for three years, then returned in his 40s, to play the best golf of his life.

He missed only one green, didn't have a bogey and didn't have a "5" on his card this bright, warm, sunny tropic day in compiling a 36-hole total of 135, nine under par.

"Probably the best score I've had since I've been back," said January. His

LBCC gymnasts open

Long Beach City College's defending national JC gymnastic champions open their season tonight when they engage Cal State Northridge in the Viking gym at 8 o'clock.

Coach John Draghi's LBCC squad is limited to 12 performers under the four-year school rules in force rather than 22 competitors as permitted by JC standards.

"It should be to our advantage to play in a bigger facility," says Jones. "The smaller gyms, with smaller courts, neutralize our quickness. That was a factor in our game at Pacific."

"We'll find out what kind of a team we've got," declares Jones. "The kids are going to have to reach back and want this one."

It will take as much effort as they can muster. San Jose is 3-2 in league after beating Fresno State Thursday, and the Spartans are billing tonight's conflict as their biggest game of the season.

The Spartans got scoring from only six players in beating Fresno, 69-66. Ken Mickey had 21 and Stan Hill, a 6-9 center from New Zealand, had 23.

BIG POSTMEN give the 49ers trouble. Jones has tried to counteract that by playing his two centers, Clarence Ruffen and Michael Wiley, at the same time.

"They looked good together in the Pacific game," Jones said of the alignment. "It's something we're going to use more and more."

San Jose has two former Long Beach City College standouts — Brian Lenzen and Steve Sincok — on its roster. Sincok started and scored four points Thursday after being sidelined a week with a bruised bicep.

Jones plans no immediate changes in his player rotation. He'll start Richard Johnson and Dale Dillon at guards; Ruffen at center; Lloyd McMillian and Larry Hudson at guards.

The game will be broadcast on KFOX-AM (1280) and KKOP-FM (93.5).

The Huskies gave the nation's No. 2-ranked team a scare before falling, 75-65, Thursday, but when Raveling made his statement, he didn't expect to take the court in Pauley (Channel 4, 4 p.m.) minus Puidokas.

Before spraining an ankle that forced him to miss the Southland trip, Puidokas led his team in scoring and/or rebounding 15 times in 18 games. He was averaging 17.5 points and 9.9 rebounds and had just moved into fourth place on the all-time Pac-8 scoring chart with 1,778 points.

With the 6-11, 260-pounder in the lineup, Raveling was, at times, able to utilize one of the largest front lines in college annals — the other giants being 6-11, 230-pound Stuart House, a freshman, and 7-2, 270-pound James Donaldson, a sophomore.

Now the brunt of the scoring falls to 6-2 Harold Rhodes, a 6-2 senior wingman who hiked his season average to nearly 18 points with a 29-point burst against USC.

Rhodes' importance was seen a week ago when the Cougars dropped from a first-place tie via a 71-68 loss to Washington at home. Raveling believes the benching of the sharpshooter from Florence, Ala., with four fouls was the key.

"I honestly believed we would have won in the second half because we are a second half team, but the loss of Harold really hurt us."

Rhodes is shooting .521, and any damage he inflicts early could cause Bartow to insert defensive demon Ray Townsend for his first action since suffering a stomach injury against California 23 days ago.

"Raymond was ready to play against Washington," said Bartow. "He should be about 80 per cent Saturday and 90 per cent by the time we go on the road."

"Unless we encounter some weird circumstances, I doubt he'll play much even when he's fully recovered. Roy (Hamilton) and Jimmy (Spillane) are playing too well to break up that combination."

heroics—as usual performed at a relaxed, casual, ambling pace—were necessary to hold off former Hawaiian Open champ Grier Jones and Japanese star Takashi Murakami, tied for second only one stroke back at 136.

Jones birdied his first five holes on the way to another 64, while Murakami, an infrequent player in the United States but a national hero in his homeland, matched the record for the 7,234-yard Waialae Country Club course with a 63 that included 10 birdies and an bogey.

Jack Nicklaus could do no better than a 72 and, for only the second time in six years, failed to qualify for the final two rounds with a 145 total, one over the cutoff figure.

Medical benefit

Major League baseball players Bobby Grich, Ed Crosby, Lyman Bostock and Al Cowens will play in a medical benefit game with other members of the Southern California Baseball Association Sunday at Dedeaux Field on the campus of USC.

Funds from the 1 p.m. game will be used for the players' medical insurance program. Spectators are asked to donate $2 for adults, $1 for children up to 12.

Montreal keeps rolling along

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

The Montreal Canadiens just keep on rolling, and the biggest question left to be answered is whether they can break their single-season record for victories.

To make matters worse for the Kings when the Canadiens make their final appearance of the season at the Forum tonight, Steve Shutt has regained his scoring touch. So has Guy Lafleur.

Shutt, the league's leading goal scorer, snapped a recent seven-game drought and now has a whopping 42 in 54 games along with 37 assists for 72 points.

Lafleur regained the NHL scoring leadership from the Kings'

Marcel Dionne with a pair of assists Thursday night at Vancouver. Lafleur has registered 38 goals and 43 assists for 81 points while Dionne has 30 goals and 49 assists for 79 points. However, Montreal has played two more games than the Kings.

Montreal set an NHL record last season with 58 victories, and with the current campaign only three-fifths completed, it stands a good chance of bettering that mark.

Coach Scotty Bowman's skaters have lost only seven times in 54 games and need to win 20 of their final 26 games to reach another milestone. With 86 points, they hold a 31-point lead over runnerup Pittsburgh and 38 over the Kings in the Norris Division.

They have scored the most goals of any NHL club (259) and allowed the fewest (125).

Although the Kings have won five of their last six starts, coach Bob Pulford's forces have been held scoreless by the Canadiens for 147 minutes, 47 seconds after suffering shutouts in their last two encounters.

The Kings do hold one advantage over the Canadiens. By banging in 12 power goals in 28 chances the last six games, the Kings lead the NHL with a 26.2 per cent conversion rate compared to Montreal's 25.6 percentage.

Boston track

BOSTON (AP) — Favored Northeastern, led by sophomore Ron Chambers of Jamaica, captured four of six individual events Friday to take a commanding lead in the opening of the 10th Greater Boston Intercollegiate indoor track championships. Chambers set a meet record of 49 feet, 5 inches in the triple jump and won the long jump in 23.8. The Huskies, who figure to pile on points in the running events today of 100y, scored 51 points in the field competition. Harvard was a distant second with 23.

There still might be a race in PCAA

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

SAN JOSE — For Long Beach State coach Dwight Jones, the annual road trip to University of Pacific and San Jose State is what college basketball is all about.

"I love this trip," Jones said Friday as his team journeyed from Stockton to Santa Clara, where his 49ers will duel San Jose State tonight.

The Pacific Coast Athletic Association contest, which begins at 8 o'clock,

The 49ers (5-1) slipped in that department Thursday night, dropping a tough 73-69 decision at Pacific.

They need a victory tonight to remain in control of the PCAA title race.

Playing in Independence Fieldhouse may help the 49ers reach that objective.

Trojans are favored to lose their 22nd

USC faces the prospect of its 22nd consecutive Pacific-8 Conference basketball defeat when it faces Washington tonight at 8 in the L.A. Sports Arena.

The Huskies, knocked out of a first-place tie in the conference by UCLA Thursday night at Pauley Pavilion, are heavy favorites to beat the Trojans, who haven't won a league game since February of 1975.

Washington is 4-2 in the league and has won 13 of its last 15 games for an overall record of 13-6.

USC is 0-6 in Pacific-8 competition and 4-14 for the season. The Trojans blew a 12-point lead over Washington State in the second half Thursday night and sustained their 21st successive league loss, 67-65.

Paramount surprises Mayfair

Bellflower in Suburban lead

By ED COLE
Staff Writer

Paramount survived a wild second half to edge co-Suburban League-leading Mayfair, 53-50, Friday evening.

The lead see-sawed through the third period of play, changing hands 12 times. At the beginning of the final period Paramount clung to a precarious one-point lead, 43-42, but with less than five minutes remaining Tom Kuyper sank two free throws to give the Monsoons the edge, 50-49.

It was up to Paramount's rangy forward Keith Korver to sink the final field goal and give the Pirates the lead for good. After a missed shot by Mayfair, Paramount went into a stall with 3:41 remaining.

Although the Monsoons were able to force two turnovers, they were unable to capitalize on either of them. Ken Korver added two free throws to insure the win for Paramount.

When these teams met last month it was a different story as Mayfair clobbered the Pirates, 86-58. Paramount came into the game Friday sporting an eight-game winning streak and an improved defense.

Paramount coach Bob Rittenger explained his team's turnaround saying, "Defense is the big thing that's made it for us. Also, the kids believe in each other."

Kuyper was the high scorer with 18 points including an 8 for 8 free-throw performance. Paramount's big gun was Keith Korver who tossed in 16 points. John Jackson lead all Paramount rebounders with 13.

Cerritos falls to Downey

SGVL race in three-way tie

It's getting pretty crowded at the top of the San Gabriel Valley League standings after Friday night's action.

Two of the tri-leaders at 4-2, Downey and Cerritos, collided and host Downey emerged a 66-64 winner by virtue of Herb Harper's rebound basket with one second remaining.

Toby Simoli paced the Vikings with 17 points while Harper finished with 11.

Warren kept pace with the leaders, but just barely, by outlasting visiting Lynwood, 95-92.

Warren held a 16-point advantage with six minutes remaining but starters Mark Mullane and Jim Uranga fouled out and Lynwood made its run near the end. With Warren clinging to a 94-92 lead, Lynwood had possession and a chance to tie the game.

But Tyren Nauulis was called for an offensive foul with nine seconds left and the Knights' hopes vanished.

In other SGVL action, Dominguez needed a pair of free throws by Leo Lang to insure a 53-51 victory.

Dominguez held a seven-point lead with 2:30 to play but Gahr rallied to within one with one minute remaining.

Stephen Clay led the Dons with 16 points. Rodney Brandon of Gahr paced all scorers with 17.

make, however, and that was evident in the final minute and one-half as Buckner, who dazzled the crowd with three slam dunks and several blocked shots, left the game after picking up his fifth foul. Valley trailed 55-49 at the time.

Shortly after Buckner took his seat, Mulder began his assault from the foul line.

With 1:24 to go, Mulder hit both ends of a one-and-one for a 57-49 lead. Thirty-three seconds later the freshman from Wilson hit another pair before missing his only attempt on the front end of a bonus situation with 33 seconds to play.

His final pair put the game out of reach, 62-55, with 15 seconds remaining.

Kirby riding Hurricane, matched his ride. The bridegroom of one month and owner of a new six-passenger Cessna 210 was returning to LAX for a midnight "redeye special" to Dallas.

"I'll get in about 5:30 a.m., put on my game face, make a store-opening appearance in the afternoon and ride twice in Ft. Worth that night and again Sunday. Sometime in between I'll try to catch some sleep."

Gay's schedule closely matches that of Joe Alexander, also slated to appear in Ft. Worth Sunday as well as Scottsdale this afternoon.

Alexander the Great was at his world championship best again Friday, booting Heavens To Betsy to the early lead in bareback riding. The Marysville resident seldom disappoints Long Beach crowds.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Associated Press

Sour grapes department:

• Dan Pastorini, quarterback of the Houston Oilers, says he wants to be traded because he doesn't like "the management, the fans or the town," the Chicago Tribune reported. The newspaper said Pastorini, 27, had asked to be traded to the Rams but Oiler coach Bum Phillips told him the Rams weren't interested. "I don't believe him," said Pastorini.

• Eddie Martindale, a freshman guard who quit the University of Mississippi basketball team last week, says coach Bob Weltlich wouldn't let the team eat dinner or breakfast after losing two road games this season. "He said we had played terribly and the same thing would happen if we lost the next game," Martindale said in a telephone interview Friday. Weltlich described the remarks as "not really true" and said the matter was "a personal conflict."

• Martina Navratilova, who defected to the United States from Czechoslovakia in September of 1975, says the captain of the Czech Davis Cup team drove her from her homeland. "The tennis federation didn't want me to go out of the country because I was becoming too 'Americanized,'" she said in an interview Friday with the Seattle Times. "One person was particularly against me — the Davis Cup captain, Antonin Bolardt. I wasn't going to give up my career because of some punk in the federation."

OLYMPIC OUTTAKES: Compressed air was injected into West German Olympic swimmers in an attempt to improve their buoyancy and speed for the Montreal races, embarrassed German sports officials have admitted. The secret tests were conducted at the team's pre-Olympic training camp in Calgary, Alta., before the start of the 1976 Summer Games, but were dropped prior to the competitions because swimmers showed no marked improvements, the German Swimming Federation acknowledged. "We started an experiment and it failed," federation president Manfred Kreitmeyer announced after Bild Zeitung newspaper disclosed the often painful experiments. "To my knowledge, the experiments were not continued during the Games," Hermann Henze, West German swimming team official at Montreal, told the Associated Press. Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, has expressed confidence in Lake Placid's ability to stage the 1980 Winter Olympics, according to members of the city's organizing committee who met with him in Dublin. "I am not worried about the ability of Lake Placid (N.Y.) to stage the 1980 Winter Games," Killanin was quoted as saying. He expressed the same confidence about Montreal's ability to stage the 1976 Summer Games, which featured incomplete stadiums, arenas and dorms, all millions of dollars over budget. While Daveport says he believes he could earn a spot on the 1980 U.S. Olympic team, but the veteran hurdler of four Olympiads isn't going to try, and instead will retire at 33 sometime this year.

BOXING BANTER: Ken Norton thinks his next fight will be against veteran heavyweight Ernie Shavers and that's fine with NBC — as long as they don't expect the network to show it. Shavers was mentioned as a replacement for injured Duane Bobick who was forced out of his March 2 Madison Square Garden bout with Norton Friday when X-rays revealed a slight cartilage tear in his rib cage. "We'll put on the Norton-Bobick fight whenever it's scheduled," said a NBC spokesman. But there is no interest in a Norton-Shavers match. Sugar Ray Leonard, the charismatic Olympic champion, makes a lucrative professional boxing debut today in a six-round preliminary bout with main event status. His junior welterweight clash in the Baltimore Civic Center with Luis (The Bull) Vega will be nationally televised (CBS Sports Spectacular) at 4:30 p.m.

BRIEFLY: Bjorn Borg pondered a tricky service by World Championship Tennis Friday as the organization filed a $5.7 million suit against the tennis star and others. The suit by the Dallas-based group came after Borg jumped from WCT to Grand Prix Tennis, a competing pro group. A $100 reward has been posted for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a spectator who assaulted Kalamazoo Wings coach Bob Lemieux during an International Hockey League game at Toledo. Oscar Wilde, pure 'n' simple

By ROBERT C. WYLDER

In many ways, Oscar Wilde's comedy "The Importance of Being Earnest" seems to me the most satisfactory theater piece in English. It isn't the funniest or the most profound or, certainly, the most significant, but it is the perfect combination of line and plot, of wit and gentle satire. It is an example of pure art, the triumph of style over substance.

Much of its considerable humor derives from its setting everything upside down in quips and aphorisms and word play.

Gwendolen: The country always bores me to death.

Cecily: Ah! That is what the papers call agricultural depression, is it not?

Lady Bracknell: The two weak points in our age are its want of principle and its want of profile.

Lady Bracknell (examining a prospective son-in-law): Do you smoke?

Jack: Well, yes, I must admit I smoke.

Lady B.: I am glad to hear it. A man should always have an occupation of some kind.

Alernon: Divorces are made in heaven.

And so on and on, delighting in language and minor iconoclasm.

The play does not pretend to mimic life; it creates its own artificial reality as it goes, an artifact pure and simple.

NOW ALONG comes Tom Stoppard with "Travesties," which is as far as I can tell is just as pure but a long way from simple. Starting with, departing from, and often referring back to "Earnest," even to the extent of using some of the

And now the two are playing in repertory at the Mark Taper Forum, oh happy day, with an excellent cast under the skillful direction of Edward Parone. One need not see both plays to enjoy either, but they are closely enough related that doing so will heighten the pleasure of each.

David Dukes heads the casts as Algernon and Henry Carr. As the former he is superior, as the latter superb. His long opening monologue in "Travesties" is a masterpiece of theatrical energy under control. Nicholas Hammond, Jean Marsh, Anita Gillette, Coral Brown, Neil Flanagan, Herbert Foster, and Richard Sanders complete the dual cast, joined in "Earnest" by Jane Connell, who as Miss Prism manages to walk off with most of the scenes she is in.

I doubt that Wilde could have approved of Stoppard's travesty/tribute to "The Importance of Being Earnest." It is far too boisterous and undisciplined for his taste. He liked his triviality straight. Stoppard, on the other hand, apparently likes his kinky.

In any case, the two plays together make about as amusing a tandem as we are likely to see for a long time. I'm in earnest about that.

Reviews

lines of the Wilde play either exactly or approximately, it also presents the reminiscences of a certain Henry Carr about his meetings with James Joyce, Tristan Tsara, and Nicolai Lenin in Zurich in 1917, during the Great War.

Though it never quite makes sense, the various scenes are sometimes immensely funny. Stoppard mixes fact and fancy, history and fiction, past and present in a completely mad blend. Does that account for the presence of Tristan Tsara, the high priest of the dadaist movement, or is it the other way around?

No matter. The play is as scattered and formless as "Earnest" is tight and structured. It comes far nearer surreal than real.

Joe was terrific — and I can just hear you saying, "You'd better say that, you coward!"

Joe was a bit late making his entrance in an all-white suit with a ruffled peach colored shirt and white tie. But he KOD every song — "My Girl," "Something Wrong with My Baby," "Amen," "Proud Mary" — I was about to say that he knocked them flat, but Joe's sensitive about cracks like that. He was touching and obviously sincere when he sang a special "My Way" lyric written by Paul Anka.

"I faced them all, and I stood tall, I fought them fair; I fought them square. The record shows I took the blows, and did it my way."

He showed an ability to kid himself. "You having a good time?" he asked one ringsider. "Cause if you're not we could go in the back and straighten it out."

'Fish' a good bet in TV poll

By JAY SHARBUTT

HOLLYWOOD — Having kids around will make you feel young again, says Bernice, wife of detective Fish. The dour old cop replies: "I don't want to be young again. I was young once and I wasn't good at it."

And thus will veteran actor Abe Vigoda, who has become to ancients what The Fonz is to teenyboppers, check in Saturday night to his new home and his own ABC series, "Fish," a spinoff from "Barney Miller."

THE exchange comes as he and Bernice (Florence Stanley) move into a big, dilapidated old house. There, they'll be caring — for a fee — for five unruly kids the courts call persons in need of supervision.

The kids come equipped with "an associate house parent," Charlie Harrison (Barry Gordon), a bumbling nebbish of 27, who is working on a doctorate in child psychology.

Fish, who isn't enthusiastic about the whole thing, is doing it only because, after 38 years as a New York cop, the gray wolf of low-pension retirement faces him and he needs to augment his income.

As he mournfully puts it later in the show, his fu-

BUT STILL in the beginning, he knows he's in for grief as he asks the cop bringing in the kids for advice on handling them. Advises the gen-darme: "Keep 'em away from regular people."

And the kids, two girls and three boys, ranging in age from preteen to teen, tumble in. They set off one of the most crisply paced, well-written opening episodes I've ever seen in situation comedy.

Vigoda, the sad, gnette, set-up soul of the 12th Precinct, makes it all work. It's not that the others are bad, they're great, but he has such timing, such acting economy he's in the one-of-a-kind class.

One pause, one shrug by him says it all.

If that doesn't do it, the expression on his basset-hound face does, as when he tries to tell Bernice he's needed at work, not at home on the kids' first day there:

"BY NOW the precinct is filled up with thieves and murderers and perverts" — a short pause — "people you can talk to."

He departs. And returns at night to bathroom woes Fish fans will appreciate, likewise his reply when Bernice asks if he's eaten yet.

'Fish' a good bet in TV poll

By JAY SHARBUTT

HOLLYWOOD — Having kids around will make you feel young again, says Bernice, wife of detective Fish. The dour old cop replies: "I don't want to be young again. I was young once and I wasn't good at it."

And thus will veteran actor Abe Vigoda, who has become to audiences what The Fonz is to teenyboppers, check in Saturday night to his new home and his own ABC series, "Fish," a spinoff from "Barney Miller."

THE exchange comes as he and Bernice (Florence Stanley) move into a big, dilapidated old house. There, they'll be caring — for a fee — for five unruly kids the courts call persons in need of supervision.

The kids come equipped with "an associate house parent," Charlie Harrison (Barry Gordon), a bumbling nebbish of 27, who is working on a doctorate in child psychology.

Fish, who isn't enthusiastic about the whole thing, is doing it only because, after 38 years as a New York cop, the gray wolf of low-pension retirement faces him and he needs to augment his income.

As he mournfully puts it later in the show, his future could be in the blue uniform of a store security guard, sitting "with a paper bag, egg salad and powdered donuts at three o'clock in the morning."

BUT STILL in the beginning, he knows he's in for grief as he asks the cop bringing in the kids for advice on handling them. Advises the gendarme: "Keep 'em away from regular people."

And the kids, two girls and three boys, ranging in age from preteen to teen, tumble in. They set off one of the most crisply paced, well-written opening episodes I've ever seen in situation comedy.

Vigoda, the sad, gnele, set-upon soul of the 12th Precinct, makes it all work. It's not that the others are bad, they're great, but he has such timing, such acting economy he's in the one-of-a-kind class.

One pause, one shrug by him says it all.

If that doesn't do it, the expression on his basketball face does, as when he tries to tell Bernice he's needed at work, not at home on the kids' first day there.

"BY NOW the precinct is filled up with thieves and murderers and perverts" — a short pause — "people you can talk to."

He departs. And returns at night to bathroom woes Fish fans will appreciate, likewise his reply when Bernice asks if he's eaten yet.

"I don't need to eat," he sighs. "I've gone straight to heartburn."

The kids, played by Denise Miller, John Cassis, Sarah Natoli, Lenny Bari and Todd Bridges, are quite believable, particularly Bridges, a black actor not yet in his teens.

Saturday's fine show is unique in two ways. ABC didn't put anyone from "Welcome Back, Kotter" in it. And it plays beautifully, has none of the uncertainty of most TV comedies on their first attempt.

So The Fish is off to a good start, hemorrhoids and all. I bet he'll be the first ratings winner so afflicted. But if the Nielsens are as high as I expect they'll be, poor old Fish may even smile.

'You can't feed snakes a friend' Minerva, Dumb Dora 'devoted' to teaching

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

Fifth graders at Ramona Elementary School in Bellflower probably know more about birth, death and life cycles than most youngsters their age.

After all, they've had good teachers.

For the lessons in the many facts of life have come from Minerva the pregnant ewe, Dumb Dora the white turkey, Denise the goat, a small meal worm farm and a multitude of rabbits, chickens, hamsters, quail and snakes.

All are members of what is popularly called the Ramona School Zoo—a menagerie that's grown steadily under the direction of science teacher Elma Beck.

"I guess the zoo began shortly after I started teaching 14 years ago," Mrs. Beck explained during a tour of the school's science lab and outdoor animal pen.

"I began by bringing rats into the classroom, and the collection of animals just kept growing."

Students and their parents have donated animals and former pets to keep the zoo stocked with various species.

"A lot of the children live in apartments and don't really have an opportunity to keep pets, except maybe goldfish or small animals," the science teacher continued.

"There's a real need for these children to have some animals to love and care for. There's a lot of responsibility here, but the children handle it well. They're gentle with the animals, and they're eager to learn about them."

One of the sixth grade students constructed a food storage box out of old lumber, and the youngsters regularly assist in cleaning the pen and feeding the animals, Mrs. Beck said.

City clerk first into new City Hall

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

Long Beach's new City Hall — its completion delayed by more than a year — received its first tenants Friday with the arrival of the city clerk's staff.

But it won't be until late March that the last department has been transferred from the old City Hall to the new structure.

officials are wasting little time in planning for the demolition of the old building.

When the City Council meets Tuesday, in fact, its members are expected to give their approval to plans for razing the 54-year-old structure and putting the demolition job out to bid.

City Engineer Tom Marchese said the demolition will begin in April or May and cost around $180,000.

In addition to leveling the building, the contractor who wins the job will refill the site and grade it in preparation for the straightening of Pacific Avenue, which now runs on either side of the building between Broadway and Third Street.

In the months to follow, the city plans to demolish the nearby utilities building and the Veterans Memorial Building, as well — after which, if all goes according to plan, the state will construct a new state building on the site.

In addition to personnel from the clerk's office, the city manager's and the council's staffs moved into the new 14-story tower Friday.

Next in line are the auditor's office and the finance department, both of which are scheduled to move Monday.

Carmelitos-rebuilding speedup sought

By JOANNE NORRIS
Staff Writer

Los Angeles County Housing Authority officials are going to ask a county supervisor and a congressman to speed up the bureaucratic processes blocking reconstruction of the Carmelitos Housing Project, it was learned Friday.

The project has been delayed by an environmental impact study — necessary before the reconstruction can go to bid — that won't be ready until April 15.

The study, being prepared by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), originally was scheduled for presentation March 15, according to county housing authority officials.

The housing authority owns and manages the Carmelitos project.

Officials said the delay, combined with the required waiting period for public comment and preparation of a final report, probably will hold up demolition of the housing project until next fall.

Under that time schedule, officials added, construction may not be started for about a year.

After noting the delays, housing authority commissioners decided Thursday they would ask for help from Supervisor James Hayes and Rep. Glenn Anderson, in whose districts the North Long Beach project lies.

"I don't know what to do," said Louis Kanaster, housing authority executive director, when discussion of Carmelitos came up at a special meeting.

New Commissioner Warren Harwood asked where pressure could be applied.

"Resolving this will be to the benefit of every public official who has anything to do with it," Harwood said, suggesting the commissioners write to Hayes and Anderson.

The delay in the environmental study, according to HUD officials, is due to a staff shortage in the Los Angeles office.

The housing authority is seeking $11.5 million in HUD funds to tear down the aging, low-income housing project and rebuild it on a smaller scale.

But the reconstruction plans have stirred controversy in the community, and county officials have been wrestling with the problem for more than two years.

Long Beach officials ordered that the project be reduced from more than 700 units to 500 units and insisted that it be limited to 29 of its present 64 acres. City officials added that they want moderately priced private homes constructed on the remainder of the land.

The letterhead carries the title: Wrigley Business and Professional Association.

It may sound like a fraternity for post-graduates, a self-promoting group, an institution.

It may be some of that, but what it is first is the community—the Wrigley community.

That's evident from the letters to "My Town."

That's apparent in the pride in their community and the credit most of them give to the group.

Mrs. William E. Kummer said it well:

"Much of the recent emphasis on maintenance has been through the efforts of the Wrigley Business and Professional Association.

"Organized after a deprecating article appeared in the press about Wrigley, they have steadily encouraged pride in our area with especial emphasis on upkeep."

The "deprecating article," which appeared in the Independent Press-Telegram three years ago, first brought bitter reaction, then self-help action.

The association was revitalized, its membership roll opened to all householders within the community and a Wrigley CB Patrol organized to communicate potential crime situations to the police.

"We live in the Wrigley district, which is No. 5 on your map, but my husband and I think it's No. 1," wrote Mrs. Hilda Lindquist.

"All different ethnic groups, different religions, politics, but still they get along."

"Our daughter attends Poly High School and loves it . . . says she wouldn't want to go to any other school."

"The trash collection is good, too. I know we sometimes put something out that is too heavy, but they never complain."

Mrs. J. C. didn't agree that Wrigley was No. 1:

"As a resident for nine years, may I suggest more police patrolling during the daytime to try and prevent so much purse-snatching."

"West 21st Street and also Magnolia Avenue are the streets where several of my friends were the victims, the latest one two days ago."

Her children are the third generation born into the Poly High district.

She doesn't speak for them or anyone else, and she wants to make that clear.

For she's no Polyanna, and she knows there are those who will scoff, but she hopes there are others who will share some of her attitudes and opinions.

For example, a diverse population, racially, ethnically and culturally, does not make a ghetto for her, and she resents application of that description to the Poly High district.

There are other, supposedly more elite sections of the city, whose socio-economic "constants" more aptly call for the ghetto label.

When she drives around her community, she sees a grand mixture of single and multiple residences, commercial properties and areas that are for use of the public.

She's not wearing blinders with tunnel vision. For she sees, too, the boarded-up, burned-out, run-down and empty structures.

Sure, they are there. But when she looks again, there are the well-kept properties that say to her, "Someone cares."

Not enough persons speak of the transition under way, the efforts to reverse deterioration, the available opportunities.

The streets are swept, lighted and repaired. There are two fire stations to serve them. They have MacArthur Park Playground, King Park Recreation Center, California Recreation Center. The schools offer a wide variety of recreational facilities.

Adjacent to Martin Luther King Park is the Neighborhood Facilities Center, which provides a multiple of services.

Not enough people talk about the transition.

Near Poly High School, new attractive apartments are appearing. South of the school, individual structures are being replaced, rehabilitated or removed.

Opportunities await those who register at the Pacific Coast Campus of Long Beach City College. The Women's Center is especially helpful to those returning to school after an absence of many years.

As a second-generation member of the Poly High District, she feels very strongly about something that isn't easily visible driving through the area.

That's the "strength of family ties," a quality alone that could provide the incentive to build a better community.

The letter was signed by Polly Johnson.

"I have lived on 17th Street for several years, and you cannot sell your property because no decent person wants to buy in this area."

"The city or state should redevelop this area with low-cost housing and get rid of the hang-around-low-class, so-called night clubs, liquor stores, apartments for dope addicts and prostitutes."

"I say either get rid of this and build up this area where decent people can live, or just tear down the homes and put all business on this street."

The letter was signed, but the signature is being withheld.

GRAFFITI IS A DIRTY word on the Westside.

The concerned residents, judging by the pinpointing of the word in 17 of 41 "My Town" responses, abhor the defacing of property in the area.

As a second-generation member of the Poly High District, she feels very strongly about something that isn't easily visible driving through the area.

That's the "strength of family ties," a quality alone that could provide the incentive to build a better community.

The letter was signed by Polly Johnson.

"I have lived on 17th Street for several years, and you cannot sell your property because no decent person wants to buy in this area."

"The city or state should redevelop this area with low-cost housing and get rid of the hang-around-low-class, so-called night clubs, liquor stores, apartments for dope addicts and prostitutes."

"I say either get rid of this and build up this area where decent people can live, or just tear down the homes and put all business on this street."

The letter was signed, but the signature is being withheld.

GRAFFITI IS A DIRTY word on the Westside.

The concerned residents, judging by the pinpointing of the word in 17 of 41 "My Town" responses, abhor the defacing of property in the area.

Carson man killed in motel 'triangle' fight

A Carson man died Friday from injuries suffered Thursday during a fight in a South Gate motel with an angry husband who apparently believed his wife was having an affair with the victim, police said.

The husband was in custody after South Gate police chased him from his Lynwood home to Compton late Thursday.

Police said Lawrence E. Johnson, 46, of 19447 Craigson Ave., returned to his motel room at 3911 Firestone Blvd. at about 7 p.m. Thursday. He was confronted by the angry husband, who had obtained a key to the room from his wife, police said.

During the argument, Johnson was struck several times on the head with a heavy object. A witness called police and gave officers the license number of a car seen leaving the motel.

Police said they traced the license to Darrell Thomas Garner, 28, of 3249 Louise Ave., Lynwood. Officers said they arrived at Garner's home Thursday night just as Garner was driving away with some clothes and his wife, whom he had apparently forced to accompany him.

Garner was chased by car and then on foot and was captured in Compton, officers said. He was booked at County-USC Medical Center's jail ward for investigation of murder and held without bail. He was reported in good condition with a bullet wound in the thigh received during the chase.

South Gate investigators said Garner apparently thought his wife, 28-year-old Laura Garner, was seeing Johnson in the motel.

Johnson was taken to St. Francis Hospital in Lynwood, then transferred to Martin Luther King Hospital in Compton where he died at 6 a.m. Friday. Mrs. Garner was not harmed.

Supervisors urged to push for later budget

From Our L.A. Bureau

Los Angeles County supervisors were urged Friday to seek state legislation enabling the county to adopt its final budget by Aug. 30 instead of June 30 each year.

The recommendation came from Chief Administrative Officer Harry Hufford, who said the change would give the board a chance to get a complete picture of assessment increases, surpluses and state revenues before setting the final tax rate.

The legislation he proposes would then allow the board to reopen the budget between Aug. 20 and Aug. 30 only to make cuts to avoid a tax rate increase in the event assessed values turn out to be lower than estimated, or there is a decline in revenues.

Supervisors are due to consider the matter Tuesday.

CB enthusiast's murder trial delayed for psychiatric tests

The trial of a citizen's band radio enthusiast known as "Mountain Spider," who is charged with murder in the beating death of a fellow CBER in Long Beach last fall, was delayed Friday so the defendant can be examined by a psychiatrist.

Long Beach Superior Court Judge Charles Litwin appointed Dr. George Abe to examine Richard French, 20, and rescheduled his trial for March 7.

French, a transient, was charged in connection with the death of Marion Dance, 55, of 355 E. 55th St., Long Beach. Dance's battered body was found by neighbors in a bedroom at his home Nov. 23.

A second suspect in the case, Gordon Lee McKenzie, 24, whose CB name is "Blue Eyes," still is being sought by police. McKenzie, also a transient, is believed to have fled to Texas or Florida.

Monday ????

Forecast for Sunday

Year birthday today: So many and so varied are the paths of probability which open before you that no estimate is possible. One thing is certain: you will wind up in places not planned, doing things beyond present skills or intentions, in company you don't yet know. Relationships are happy. Today's natives work best in isolation with materials or topics that would be upset by workday congestion. Those born this year are romanticists, mystics, salesmen for intangibles.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Take initiative to square off accounts, collect what is owed you, redeem obligations. Cultivate new acquaintances. Pass on a good word to old friends.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Be in the middle of whatever is happening in your community. Stay within your budget. Don't pick up other people's checks or expect them to pay your tabs.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Those who care seek you out, one way or another. Be ready with open questions. Find out who is doing what in local circles, how your efforts can help.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): With many errands to run, plenty to say, more to observe than most people, you have no excuse for seclusion. Join a group on a tour or invite friends home.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): In a mild climate it isn't too early to begin your garden; elsewhere plant it. If you have no garden, find analogous creativity within a choice of hobbies.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Details come together in your mind, results are useful. Presented in the right way, others enjoy your original thinking. Look up people you lost touch with.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If you do volunteer work, take credit, line up connections to be called again. Even inconspicuous action can make your part of the world a nicer place.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It's okay if you do very little beyond loafing. Where you can share what you have in peace, fine, but be wary of those who scatter money, waste energy.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Renewed contacts, hearing from friends out of the distant past provides much food for thought. Pick tasks that clear the way for career moves to come.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pursue the obvious, deal with what is on the surface in good faith. Take people at their word until you know more about them, how they express themselves.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You have no real problem, have the luck to be surrounded by others who ally cope with theirs or likewise are tension-free. Relax, go along with the crew.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Stay at or near home. Attend chores that must be caught up sometime. Entertain visitors. You earn much that would escape attention outside your milieu.

These two house plants have opposite watering needs

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

When I am asked, "What kind of house plants should I buy that are easy to grow?" I reply, "Are you a heavy handed waterer or are you a forgetful waterer?"

There is one type of indoor house plant that needs lots of water, another that can get by for three weeks or even longer without a drink of water.

Spathiphyllum with shiny white calla-like blossoms love lots of water, and thrives better if fed more frequently than most of the other house plants.

We saw a spathiphyllum in a pool of water with a waterfall. The gardener had placed the shard (pieces from the broken clay flower pot) around the root ball of the plant to prevent the movement of the water from washing away the soil from the plant roots. That plant thrived and flowered for long periods of time.

Spathiphyllum won't grow well if the pot stands in a saucer of water all the time, or in a slightly larger container that is drainless (jardiniere). The water should be emptied from either one, after the plant has been well watered. The water becomes stagnant if it stands for a period of time, whereas the plant setting in the pool with water cascading around it receives air.

The somewhat drought-resistant plant is Sansevieria, commonly called Snake Leopard Lily, Bow String-Hemp, or Mother-in-Law plant, has thick succulent looking leaves. It looks as though the plant should belong to the cactus family, instead is of the lily family. The leaves are thick, stiff, and tall.

We've seen a planting of them in a planter box that was part of the building wall with an eastern exposure. They tolerated all the east sun that beat at them during the hot summer weather. The white blossoms are reminiscent of the intensely fragrant night blooming jasmine (the Cestrum nocturnum) if, and when, they ever bloom. If the plant flowers, it doesn't repeat again, if ever.

Most of the other kinds of indoor house plants are watered more frequently.

For bare root plants, such as roses, fruit trees, shade trees, cane berries, strawberries, root vegetables, soil should be kept moist until the new growths sprout forth. Likewise, the growing soil should not be allowed to dry.

ONE OF OUR professional gardener friends urged us to remind all gardeners that early February is one of the most ideal times to apply a pre-emerge herbicide to attack the weed seeds of spurge before they begin to sprout in a dichondra lawn. That herbicide also attacks numerous other small broad leaf weed seeds, and blade grass weed seeds.

Grass lawns that were infested with spurge last year can be attacked with a post emerge herbicide in March, after the weed seeds have sprouted.

There are turf fertilizers, too, formulated for grass lawns that have herbicides (post emerge) that attack the weeds.

From Our L.A. Bureau

The deputy director of the Los Angeles County Beaches Department Friday told the county Civil Service Commission he had no personal knowledge of any exam rigging or anyone "getting to an interviewer" for a beach job.

Ken Johnson was responding to earlier allegations made by the department's personnel officer, William Plikuhn, who said civil service tests in the department were rigged to show favoritism for friends and relatives of department management.

Johnson said he had had "many, many discussions" with Plikuhn over the personnel officer's concerns about the possibility of rigging.

"Plikuhn was obsessed with the idea that everything was being rigged," Johnson said. He could not always take as fact Plikuhn's statements about rigging, Johnson told the commission.

Johnson said Plikuhn was "too gruff" with department personnel and that Plikuhn had a "running personality conflict" with Robert Burnside, a deputy director of the department.

Plikuhn had testified earlier that Burnside constantly interfered with personnel operations and civil service testing procedures.

Johnson noted, however, that Plikuhn was new to the job at the time most of the disputed incidents occurred and that Burnside felt it necessary to maintain some control over personnel until Plikuhn could eventually assume responsibility for the whole operation.

Johnson said this conflict between the two was, in his opinion, the basis for most of Plikuhn's complaints.

Plikuhn testified he had been told to find jobs for four black youths from Pepperdine University because they were "friends of Supervisor Kenneth Hahn."

Johnson, however, told the commission he was present at a meeting with Plikuhn and Burnside when the incident was discussed. He said it was his understanding that Burnside merely told Plikuhn to notify the four youths when the exam for parking lot attendant would be held.

"I did not interpret Burnside's statement as meaning any pressure was being used to get the jobs for the youths," Johnson said.

Asked why he did not investigate more of Pli-kuhn's complaints, Johnson answered that in many cases he did have discussions with other members of the personnel department at the downtown Los Angeles headquarters.

But he said, "If you get so many complaints, it becomes a pattern of crying wolf, and it is impossible to assume as fact all the allegations made."

The hearing before the full three-member Civil Service Commission will continue Monday. Commissioners each receive $100 a day for hearing the matter.

Special protection asked for Southland's rare butterflies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Parts of the Los Angeles International Airport, an oil refinery and a rifle range are among nearly 100 square miles of California land proposed as habitat critical to the survival of six endangered species of butterflies and two plants.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said the proposed rule does not mean that the refinery, airport or the Army must change operations.

"BUT THIS is proof that some endangered species can continue to co-exist side by side with human activities," said Keith M. Schreiner, associate director of the service.

One of the species, the El Segundo Blue Butterfly, exists nowhere in the world except in a two-acre area at a Standard Oil Co. of California refinery and at the west end of the Los Angeles International Airport.

The refinery has built a chain-link fence around the area to protect the inch-wide butterflies. The government rule would probably not affect a private oil company, but it might control development of Los Angeles airport, where federal funds are used. Such an order "is not expected to severely impact existing activities," a spokesman said.

Another species, the Smith's Blue Butterfly, is on the U.S. Army installation at Ft. Ord, but has been disrupted by the introduction of ice plants. The Army is trying to establish several preserves to protect the remaining butterflies.

AFTER reading written arguments, the government will decide in April what to do. If approved, the rule would prevent federal funds from being used to destroy or change the environment of these butterflies.

Most of the areas proposed as critical habitat are along the California coastline and include isolated sand dunes, bogs and mountain areas. California's human population is along the same coastline, and changes in the land have isolated these butterfly species.

Other species and parts of their habitats now being proposed for protection are:

—The Lange's Metalmark Butterfly — Industrial and agricultural development have confined the species to a few acres of sand dunes near Antioch.

—The Mission Blue Butterfly — Because this butterfly is critically dependent upon a particular species of plant which now grows only at Twin Peaks and the San Bruno Mountains, the remaining populations are confined to those areas. The San Francisco County population exists amid the city's radio and TV towers, on a narrow strip of relatively undeveloped private land that is sandwiched between residential areas.

—The San Bruno Butterfly — The range is now restricted to a few moist canyons and other portions of San Mateo County. The butterfly is dependent upon the present lie of the land and the floral elements in the valleys. Most of the land is under private ownership.

—The Lotus Blue Butterfly — The principal portion of the butterfly's habitat occurs on a powerline right of way near the edge of an isolated bog in Mendocino County.

—The Antioch Dunes Evening Primrose and Contra Costa Wallflower — They share the same ecosystem as Lange's metalmark butterfly and face the same threats. None of the endangered butterflies feed on these plants.

Adrift two months

Japanese mariner won't quit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Japanese sailor Tomio Ikegawa, who survived more than two months adrift in a dismantled sailboat, went back to sea Friday and laid a course for San Francisco.

A Coast Guard spokesman said Ikegawa, 25, motored away from Ft. Bragg shortly after 2 p.m., hoping to find wind that would carry him the 110 miles south to San Francisco in three days' time.

Ikegawa had been drinking sea water for seven days when he was spotted. He took on provisions and jury rigged his fractured mast after being towed into Fort Bragg Thursday night.

Earlier, Coast Guard spokesman Ed Conlon said communication with Ikegawa was hampered since he could write very little English and was unable to speak it at all.

Ikegawa told officials his boat was bound for San Francisco from Ehime, Japan when it was disabled in 60-foot seas last Nov. 24.

He said he had refused to hitch a ride with a New Zealand freighter that stopped Jan. 29 and gave him milk, water and canned food, stubbornly thinking he could bring in his vessel alone.

Conlon said the 25-foot disabled craft first had been sighted and towed Thursday evening by a fishing trawler, the Cape Wendy, then pulled into safety to the Fort Bragg Coast Guard station by a Guard cutter.

Paul Douglas, owner of the 38-foot Cape Wendy, said despite the language barrier, the men shared common relief when the long ordeal was finally over.

"He was very happy to see us," Douglas said in a telephone interview. "I was really happy to help him out."

When he was finally safe onboard the fishing vessel after being disabled at sea 72 days, Douglas said Ikegawa was prepared to relate a bit of his adventure.

"HE HANDED me a letter, a note he scribbled out. He couldn't speak English," Douglas said. "He said he was out of food and water for a week."

Ikegawa's message told of the start of the ill-fated voyage, when he set out from Japan on Oct. 10. He had provisions onboard for 72 days, Douglas said.

AFTER THE mast broke he began drifting at sea, Douglas said, using the small auxiliary engine to correct his course. He had only an amateur all-band radio on board.

The first clue leading to the crippled sailboat, Douglas said, was when he "saw this little blip on the radar about 4:30 p.m."

"I couldn't see anything," he said. "Then I saw this sheet-type arrangement on a sail way off in the distance."

Douglas said the ingenious sailor had rigged a tiny six-foot high sail, and "he knew that I saw him and started waving."

Douglas congratulated Ikegawa's seamanship, and said the man eventually might have sailed in unassisted.

Victim's son says suspect not killer

A 9-year-old Long Beach boy testified at a preliminary hearing in Municipal Court Friday that a murder defendant was one of two men who held up his parents in a parking lot near their home last fall, but not the one who had shot and killed his father.

Kevin Speer said the defendant, Robert J. Lewis, 23, of 1119 S. Washington Ave., Compton, had stolen a purse belonging to the boy's mother, Barbara Menta, while a second man pointed a gun at Ms. Menta's head while she sat in the car.

Ms. Menta testified that her common-law husband of 15 years, Lavern Speer, was ordered to get out of the car and that Lewis attempted to search Speer's pockets.

Ms. Menta said that when Speer, 55, of 220 Elm Ave., "started running across the parking lot and hollering 'Help!,' the man who had held her at gunpoint ran after him and knocked him to the ground with his fist."

While Speer was still on the ground, the gunman "shot him twice, looked at me and shot him again as he was walking away," Ms. Menta testified.

Lewis was bound over for trial on a murder charge by Judge Kenneth Sutherland and ordered to appear in Superior Court Feb. 16 for arraignment.

Long Beach homicide investigators still are searching for the second suspect in the case, 23-year-old Samuel Laws, also of Compton.

Norwalk boy killed, sister hurt in crash

A 16-year-old Norwalk boy was killed and his 15-year-old sister critically injured Friday when their car hit a tree and utility pole on Shoemaker Avenue in Santa Fe Springs at 2:30 p.m.

Sheriff's deputies said the driver, Edward Pablo Grado, of 14702 Seaford Ave., was pronounced dead at the scene. His sister, Leticia, the only passenger, was admitted to Whittier Presbyterian Hospital's intensive care unit.

Search ended for survivors

YOSEMITE (AP) — Park rangers Friday abandoned the search for the pilot and any passengers who may have been aboard a downed, marijuana-carrying airplane discovered last month.

The search was called off after six days of searching Yosemite National Park's lake area.

Wreckage of the twin-engine plane, reported missing Dec. 10, was discovered in the park Jan. 30. Rangers found 1,500 pounds of marijuana with the wreckage.

THE BEST WEED'N FEED FOR DICHONDRA

After years of testing and experimenting with hundreds of different weed control combinations, PAX research has developed the most effective weed-and-feed for dichondra lawns on the market today. Kills and prevents most weeds and gives your dichondra slow and fast feeding.

Reg. $9.88 NOW $12.98

PAX SUPER GOLD WEED'N FEED

- Prevents Crabgrass, Oxalis, Spurge, Bluegrass and many other pesky weeds.
- Kills Annual Bluegrass (poa annua), Oxalis plants and many other weeds in dichondra.
- Contains fast releasing and slow sustained release nitrogen plant food.
